National Dances

Elaborate dances representing different nations, an address by Rev. Dennis J. Wholey, the pastor, and a presentation of prizes were features of the graduation exercises of the Sunday school of the church of the Sacred Heart, Newton Centre, held Monday evening in Lincoln hall, Newton Highlands. The exercises were under the general direction of Rev. James F. Haney, assistant pastor, and were witnessed by a gathering of parents and friends who filled the hall to its capacity.

The lengthy program opened with "Summer Voices Ringing," sung by the graduating class. Miss Rach Dekusha rendered a violin solo, which was followed by a carefully prepared paper, "History of the Catholic Church in the United States," by Miss Frances Mullen.

"The Lily White Dance," arranged by Miss Leary, was participated in by Mary Wholey, Catherine DeRusha, Claire Kincaire, Mary Bright, Mary Ryan, Teresa Driscoll, Clara Leary, Anna Dean, Mary O'Brien and Gladys Wholey. Miss Mary Connors was soloist and Miss Mildred Levi pianist.

Reading, "Prayer," was given by Katherine Kelley, after which 16 boys directed by Dr. Frank Keleher, sang "Lead Kindly Light." Miss Grace C. Kerrigan won warm applause in a graceful skirt dance.

An unusually pretty spectacle was a sunflower song and dance under the direction of Miss Watson, assisted by Miss Nellie McGrath. Those participating were Madeline Schneider, Ellen O'Kane, Mary Denison, Jennie Degnan, Mary Clifford, Minnie Darcy and Claire DeRusha, the latter being soloist. Miss Mary English was pianist.

The dance of nations was under the general direction of Miss Watson, with Miss Mildred Levi accompanist. Each dance was finely executed and each won appreciative applause, especially the Irish reel. These dances were given by the following young people:

Dutch—Florence McKinnon, Grace Kincaire, Catherine Murphy, Katherine V. Horrigan, Mary McGrath, Margaret Thornton and Katherine Ferris soloist. Scotch—Katherine Foley, Margaret Molnerney, Margaret Ashell, Madeline Donahue, Maud Henriks, Margaret Fitzgerald, Helen Horgan, Lucy Prevost, Mary Green, Elizabeth Driscoll, Frida Dean and Mary White soloist.

Italian—Gertrude Kent, Teresa Leary, Julia Sullivan, Grace Kerrigan, Alice O'Kane, Mary O'Brien, Agnes McHugh, and Teresa Leary and Agnes McHugh as soloists.

Irish reel—Margaret King, Priscilla Vachon, Agnes Murphy, Grace Fardon, Grace Kincaire, Margaret Desmond, Margaret Clark, Claire DeRusha, May Foley, Kathryn Bright, May Uinic and Jennie Degnan.

"The Sacrifice of the Mass," by Gertrude McDonald, proved of much interest and instruction. This was followed by a recitation by Margaret Reeves and the song, "Marching On," rendered by the class.

Following the graduating address by Mary MacLellan, there was an address by Rev. Fr. Wholey in which he offered sound advice and kindly counsel to the young people.

The first prize for excellence in work and in essays was then awarded Gertrude McDonald. The second was won by Mary Kelley and the third by Francis Mullen. Honorable mention was received by John Higgins, Paul DeRusha, Mary MacLellan and May Foley.

A patriotic feature, the flag drill, closed the exercises, being given by Nora Coleman, Pauline Pearson, Mary McDonald, Mary King, Anna Monaghan, Frances Sedelmaier, Anne Walker, Elvira Dean, Minnie Dunn, Katherine Keating, Mary Dunn, Nellie Clifford, Alice Irving, Mary Warner, Helen McCarthy and Frances McInerney.

The graduates were Delta Alice Dunn, Winifred Margaret Foley, Mary C. MacLellan, Mary Agnes Foley, Kathryn L. Kelly, James Francis Gallagher, John Joseph Connor, Paul Herbert DeRusha, Daniel Calnan, Edward Dunn, Louis Joseph Sullivan, Thomas Francis Mullen, and John Joseph Higgins.

Railway Accident

Two outward electric cars of the Newton street railway system came together in a rear end collision on Commonwealth avenue, near Exeter street, West Newton, at 4:30 Sunday afternoon. Of four persons taken to the Newton hospital the most seriously injured was conductor D. H. Lebonite, who received a knockout blow in the solar plexus.

The accident is said to have been due to motorman King of the second car misjudging the distance to the electric ahead, when the latter had come to a stop on account of the trolley flying off. Both cars were well filled with passengers, who fortunately escaped serious injury. Dr. Henry M. Emmons of Jamaica Plain had the skin scraped off his shin, and after being attended at the hospital went to his home. Two women were taken to the hospital and another was taken to a doctor's office by general manager Matthew C. Brush, but all three suffered nothing more serious than a shaking up and a bad fright. Neither required the services of a physician.

As the cars were bowling along Commonwealth avenue toward Auburndale the trolley came off the forward electric after the car had rounded a slight curve. Conductor Lebonite stepped onto the rear fender to adjust the trolley, when the second car bumped into the electric and "knocked out" Lebonite. King has had about five months' experience on local street cars and was considered a careful employee. Lebonite was hurried to the hospital, where it was stated that he would not suffer any serious injury. Much to the surprise of those who saw the accident no bones were broken. The accident caused but little delay on the Commonwealth avenue line.

Political Notes

The Republican State Committee has made its annual apportionment of delegates to the various political conventions this coming fall. Newton gains 3 delegates, with 26 in all, apportioned as follows: Ward one, 2; Ward two, 4; Ward three, 4; Ward four, 3; Ward five, 4; Ward six, 5 and Ward seven, 4. The state convention is entitled to 1572 delegates, the First Middlesex Senatorial, to 57 and Middlesex county to 392.

A Penny Saved.

When Benjamin Franklin wrote "A penny saved is a penny earned," he did not mean a penny skimmed from our daily living or from our necessities. That is not "a penny saved" in the best sense. It is a penny stolen from yourself. A penny saved is a penny rescued from waste. An hour taken from needed sleep is not an hour saved, but an hour stolen. An hour taken from idle gossip and turned to some good account—that is an hour saved. And it is the same way with our money and our products. There is no economy in self denial. It is the duty of every man and woman to live the fullest and best life possible, to get the most they can out of life, to nourish the body and mind and soul and to develop them to the highest possible degree. This cannot be done by skimping. Economy is necessary, but we must not mistake what economy is. We must save the wastes, stop the leaks; but, having saved, we must put our savings to some good use, else we are like the miser with his gold—a detriment to society instead of a good.—Exchange.

The London Police Whistle.

What is the most powerful weapon a man can carry against the possible dangers of nocturnal London? For general utility and for special emergencies you cannot at least such is one night rambler's experience—beat the ordinary police whistle. In addition to its services as a call—once for a growler, two for a hansom—there are times, happily extremely rare, when it may prove a tower of strength. One such occasion the writer can recall. About two hours after midnight in a quiet byway. An agitated elderly gentleman at an open door, which he is afraid to enter. The lock has been forced, and within may be—burglars! Have you seen a policeman? No. But three blasts on the whistle and the deserted pavement swarms with them. From every corner one arrives, and the house is surrounded. The home going citizen knows not by what forces he is encompassed till he sounds that whistle in his or some one else's emergency.—London Standard.

When the Snuffbox Went Round.

A curious characteristic of the earlier days of club life was the almost universal practice of snuff taking and its very slow replacement by the use of tobacco. It was part of a gentleman's education to manipulate a snuffbox elegantly, and the possession of a number of costly specimens of these receptacles was indispensable, explaining why snuffboxes of every variety in gold, silver, enameled and jewel incrustated, are nowadays so largely found among the curiosities of the collector. There were snuffboxes kept full in every room in the clubhouse, and the frequent call for it by an irritable old member was one of the hits in Bulwer Lytton's play "Money." The supply of snuff was made gratis to members. The cost amounted to £20 or £30 a year, and as the indulgence in tobacco in this form gradually gave way to that of smoking the expenditure was thought unnecessary.—Fortnightly Review.

Costly Keys.

One thousand seven hundred pounds was the sum given by Count Adolphe de Rothschild for what may be said to be the most valuable key in the world. It is marked with the arms of the Strozzi family and is believed to be the work of the great Italian artist Benvenuto Cellini, who flourished in the sixteenth century. The key is chiseled out of a block of steel, presenting two grotesque female figures and ornamented with various masks and scrolls. Another costly key, which formerly belonged to the Medici family, is in the South Kensington museum, London. The upper part of the bow rests upon a square temple, inclosing a standing figure, exquisitely chiseled, holding a shield. The pipe consists of a column with a Corinthian capital.

The Sphinx.

The word sphinx is from the Greek and means the strangler and was applied to a fabred creature of the Egyptians which had the body of a lion, the head of a man or an animal and two wings attached to its sides. In the Egyptian hieroglyphs the sphinx symbolized wisdom and power united. It has been supposed that the fact that the overflow of the Nile occurred when the sun was in the constellations Leo and Virgo gave the idea of the combinations of form in the sphinx, but this idea seems quite unfounded. In Egypt the reigning monarch was usually represented in the form of a sphinx.

A Hungarian burglar, who was once a painter of considerable repute, was ransacking a house when he came across the portrait of a very beautiful young woman which had been left unfinished by the artist. He began to add the finishing touches to the picture and was discovered hard at work by the owner of the house, who promptly sent for the police.

Too Easy.

Miss Cicero—Here is an example for you, Willie: A boy skates two miles the first day, three miles the second day, four miles the third day—Willie—Shucks! I could beat that example without half trying.—Smith's Magazine.

Reckless.

Mamma—if you had two pennies, Willie, and I was to give you three more, how much would you have? Willie—Make it dollars, mamma. What's the use of being stingy with make believe money?

Never depend upon your genius. If you have none, industry will supply the deficiency.—Huskins.

The Owner and the Visitor.

His house, the first he had ever owned, being nearly finished, the Flatbush man went forth one fine afternoon to inspect it. As he entered the front door he observed a well dressed man standing within, apparently admiring the beauties of construction and decoration. In an instant the pride of the owner swelled within him. Here was where he would make the visitor verdant with envy and, incidentally, intercept a few bouquets for himself. Stepping up to the stranger, he remarked:

"It's a beautiful house, isn't it? It's worth every cent of the investment and a great deal more."

"You are right," replied the stranger. "You are, I suppose?"

"Yes, I'm the owner," interrupted the other, "and just let me tell you that there are not many men round here who own as fine a house as this."

"I quite believe you," serenely answered the visitor. "I'm the man, you see, who holds the first mortgage on it."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The First Woman Whip.

Who was the first "femme cocher?" To the Princess de Metternich, a lady of quality in the fullest meaning of the word, who flourished under the second empire, this honor must be accorded, says the London Chronicle. For in the days when the woman whip was a very rare spectacle indeed this dauntless dame was frequently to be seen driving her phaeton through Paris. One day two facetious youths took it into their heads to signal to her. "Pat, cocher!" The princess entered into the spirit of the joke. She drew up. "By the hour," said the two, sending themselves. "Where?" "Bois de Boulogne." She whipped up without another word and drove off to the Bois. After a silent tour of something over an hour the merry twain began to tire and asked to be put down. "Very good, citizens," said the "cocher," depositing them and holding out her hand. "My fare is 300 francs per hour for my poor." In the event the laugh proved to be on her side.

Rickshaws and Dandies.

In the mountain districts of India the principal vehicles of passenger conveyance are the rickshaw and the dandy, with which Rudyard Kipling has made us familiar. The rickshaw is pushed and pulled through the streets and on the roads leading out into the country by four coolies, and the dandy is carried on the shoulders of four and sometimes six coolies. Saddle ponies are also used to some extent, but most of the inhabitants and quite all visitors use the rickshaw and dandy. The latter is constructed on the plan of a sleigh box, but longer. A pole is attached fore and aft, which is long enough to give a springy motion when the coolies are walking and trotting. A crosspiece rests on the shoulders of the coolies and is shifted now and then from one shoulder to the other for rest. By the command of the coolie in charge this shift is made simultaneously.

Castle Garden.

Castle Garden was built by the United States in 1807 from the plans of Lieutenant Colonel Jonathan Williams, C. E., and was called Fort Clinton. In 1822 it was ceded to New York city. In 1824 it became a place of amusement and about 1826 got the name of Castle Garden. In 1845 there were Ethiopean minstrels there, in 1847-48 theatrical companies played there, and in 1850 Jenny Lind sang there. In 1853 it was closed as a place of amusement, and the commissioners of immigration took it as an immigrant depot. In 1870 it suffered from fire, and on July 9, 1870, it was burned to the ground. It was rebuilt at once. In 1892 the depot was moved to Ellis Island, and Castle Garden reverted to the city, which in 1896 opened an aquarium there.

A Well Meant Suggestion.

At an "at home" given by a Yorkshire gentleman's wife an outside manservant had to do duty for a butler. The man was astonished at the thin slices of bread and butter with which he served his mistress's guests. As he was serving an ancient dowager for the fourth time he said to her in a voice that was meant for a whisper, but which was audible to the whole room, "If yer slaps three or four slices together, mum, maybe yer can get a bite."—London Telegraph.

A Lesson in Ornithology.

A gentleman who rather overvalued himself, looking at a case of birds, said to an ornithologist who was with him, "What is that bird?"

"That," said the other, "is a magpie."

"It's not my idea of a magpie," was the rejoinder.

"Perhaps not," replied his friend, "but it's God's idea of a magpie."—House Beautiful.

Quickly Supplied.

There have been many strange things in English history. One of the most curious was recently mentioned by a little schoolgirl.

"The hydra," said this much informed young person, "was married to Henry the Eighth. When he cut her head off, another one sprang right up."

She Could See For Herself.

Mrs. Citty—Bridget, who was that at the door just now? Bridget—A leddy wantin' t' know if we had furnished rooms. Mrs. Citty—What did you tell her? Bridget—Sure, an' I told her that all our rooms were furnished. She's lookin' at the ill'ry now.—Puck.

Lack of Confidence.

Visitor—Do they treat you well here? Prisoner—Generally they does, only they hurts me feelin' by their lack of confidence. They won't let me have a latchkey.

Police Paragraphs

Probable cause being found Frank R. Martin, aged 31, employed as a carpenter and living at 84 Salem street, Medford, was held in $500 for the grand jury, when arraigned in the police court Monday morning, on charges of breaking and entering and larceny at the house of Howard Emerson, 54 Montvale road, Newton Centre.

Martin pleaded not guilty. Inspector Fletcher testified to locating him in Providence, where, he said, Martin had gone after pawning some of the jewelry stolen from the house. About $500 worth of jewelry was stolen, the robbery having occurred last week.

A certified copy of Martin's conviction in 14 Essex county cases was admitted as evidence. The police testified that he had served terms in state prison, Concord reformatory and two terms in the house of correction. In the copy of his conviction offered as evidence he was named as a "common and notorious thief" in a conviction made at Lawrence.

Salvation Army

Housing 35 tired and worthy mothers, most of them from the poorer districts of Boston, the Salvation Army fresh air camp at West Newton was opened Monday morning for another summer. The camp is in charge of Capt. Charles Abraham, who in past seasons earned a reputation of looking royally after her appreciative guests. The present guests will remain 10 days, when another delegation of 35 will be received for a similar period. This schedule will be followed all summer, and in addition about 75 children will be given a day's outing every Friday.

The success of this fresh air camp is well known, and this season promises to find even a larger number than usual reveling in the charms of the attractive suburban home.

—Crosby's Restaurant, 19 School street, Boston, is a good place to dine, if "It is more fun to see a man read a puff on himself in a newspaper than to see a fat man slip on a banana peel. The narrow minded man reads it over seven or eight times, and then goes around to appropriate what copies he can. The kind hearted man goes around to the office and pays what he owes. The successful business man who advertises regularly and makes money by it, immediately starts out to find the editor and the two walk silently down the street and the business man takes sugar in his and they both eat a clove or two and life is sweeter and peace settles down on their hearts for moments. Such is the experience of a mustard seed that falls on different ground."

Evicted

Their household goods having, it is said, been moved onto the sidewalk during the absence of the owner, members of the family Mrs. Axel P. Larsen, wife of a blacksmith living at 458 Water- town street, and her four children were brought to police headquarters at an early hour Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Larsen returned home last Monday evening, it is stated, and found her children and furniture out of doors. She took the little folk to the black- smith shop of her husband and made them as comfortable as possible. At midnight a policeman learned of the occurrence and notified the police.

Read Fund Picnic

The annual Read Fund picnic, the gift of the late Charles A. Read, was held last Tuesday at Norumbega Park as in former years. Fully one thousand children had a delightful day at this charming spot, enjoying the merry-go- round, the menagerie, the vaudeville performance and above all, the lunch. The crowd gathered early in Norumbega square, although the ten special cars were not scheduled to start until nine o'clock. The children kept Sergeant Clay and a dozen big policemen quite busy warding off possible accidents, as the regular cars passed to and fro.

Not an accident marred the pleasure of the day and all returned in the late afternoon tired and happy. Mr. Frank W. Chase, master of the Bigelow School handled the picnic in a most efficient manner.

Mr. and Mrs. Gustav W. Ulmer of Newton Centre and Capt. Dana B. Blackman of Brant Rock were married last week Thursday evening at the home of the bride, 32 Bowen street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Rice assisted by his brother Prof. William North Rice of Wesleyan University. Miss Rachel C. Rice, sister of the bride, and Miss Margaret Crawford, of Middletown, Conn., cousin of the bride, were the bridesmaids. The groom was the bride's cousin, Fred N. Crawford of Middletown and Philip Jacobs and Arthur Jacobs of Brookline. The decorations were ferns, daisies and buttercups. Prof. and Mrs. Seaman will spend their honeymoon in Nova Scotia and Maine and later will go to Green- castle, Indiana, where they will be at home after October 1st.

Holden and Marion S. Cushing of Boston were the bridesmaids. Dr. William K. P. Emerson of Boston was the best man and Mr. Arthur M. Man- ning of West Newton and Dr. Luther G. Paul were the ushers.

A reception followed the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Thayer being assisted in receiving by Mrs. Seaver and Mrs. S. W. Manning.

Dr. and Mrs. Thayer will reside at 355 Walnut street, Newtonville, where they will be at home Wednesdays in October.

Morse--Thompson

At St. Margaret's church at Staats- burg-on-the-Hudson last Saturday noon occurred the wedding of Miss Anne Thompson and Mr. Samuel F. B. Morse of Newtonville, the captain of last year's Yale football team. A special train from New York took a large party of guests to the wedding. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin and proceeded to the altar which was simply decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers. Rev. C. H. Duncan, rector of the church, performed the ceremony and the bride was given away by her cousin Mr. Lewis S. Thompson.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, trimmed with old point lace and a veil of old lace which is a priceless heirloom in her family. The flower girl was Miss Anna Rogers of Hyde Park and the best man Mr. W. Dixon. The ushers all of Yale, were Messrs. Blair, Mitchell, Knox, Rogers, Bushnell, Tracey, Tuttle and Truesdale. Later the bridal party proceeded to Mr. L. S. Thompson's summer home, "Stonehurst," where the wedding breakfast was served and then Mr. and Mrs. Morse left in an automobile for a trip to the Adirondacks. They will make their future home in California.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO

Sometimes when sickness is in the family and a physician has been called in and a prescription written, you have noticed the name of some particular drug printed on the paper on which the doctor writes the prescription.

This does not mean that you are com- pelled to take your prescription to the druggist whose name appears on the paper.

It is recognized the world over that a patient has the privilege of taking the prescription to any drug store that he prefers.

The prescription department in our store is always watched over by a regis- tered pharmacist; a doctor's prescrip- tions are always filled exactly according to the way he intended they should be filled.

The Newton tax payer had better prepare for a higher tax rate the present year, if coming events cast their shadows before. Indications now point to a substantial increase in the $16.40 rate of 1906, altho the Assessors may, by diligent search, find enough property to keep it down. The city tax levy is some $70,- 000 more than last year, the metropolitan assessments will show a very large increase and there are substantial additions to the state and county taxes. The outlook is not at all assuring.

The great interest with which our special trade edition has been received and the consequent demand for space, has compelled us to postpone the issue for a week or two in order to accommodate our patrons. We hope to issue the edition with our regular number for July 19th and exceedingly regret that circumstances prevent us from an earlier publication.

Boston loses the services of a broad-minded, practical, and straight forward man in the inelegibility of Mr. George H. Ellis to serve on its finance commission.

It is a pity that Boston must lose the services on the proposed financial commission of so keen and sound a business man as Mr. George H. Ellis, the nominee of the Merchants' Association, because he happens to be a resident of Newton. The requirement that these commissioners must be actual citizens of Boston, not merely men who do business in the city, is in accord with the general law and custom, but in this case it grievously narrows the range of choice. More and more of late years have the makers of the prosperity of Boston gone to establish their homes in the beautiful suburban communities just beyond the municipal borders. If an ideal list of the Boston business men most fit to serve as guardians of the municipality were drawn up, more than one-half of these would probably be found to be residents of Cambridge, or Newton, or Brookline, or Malden, or Somerville, or Winchester, or Weston, or some other fortunate town of the Greater Boston neighborhood. Strangely enough this fact is both one of the results and one of the causes of the unsatisfactory municipal housekeeping of Boston itself.—Boston Transcript.

Street Railway Notes

In connection with the revised schedule of fares on the Newton & Boston Street Railway Company, as announced in this issue, attention is called by the management of the company to the following reasons which necessitate the changes outlined in the new schedule.

The Newton & Boston Company began operation in 1892, and has gradually extended its lines until they comprise the present system. The company has invested in its enterprise a large amount of money and the capitalization of the company represents actual cash invested in its property, as has been proved by repeated investigations of independent authorities. The stockholders of the company have paid more than $100,000 a share in cash for the capital stock of the company. The stockholders have failed to receive any dividends for the past seven years upon their capital invested, and during the last five years, have been compelled to provide $157,707.00 in addition to the total receipts in order to keep the road in operation. The gross earnings in 1902 were $70,793 and in 1906 only $63,657. The rate of fare charged by the company has been at all times exceptionally low. The distance from Needham to Watertown, for which a fare of five cents has been charged being eight and a quarter miles, and the distance from Needham to Lake street being eight and one half miles, it has been demonstrated to the management of the company that the fare rates that the above rates of fare are not sufficient to allow the company to continue in operation. The company has received assistance in very large measure from the other companies operating in harmony with it, and it has been run on the most economical basis possible. Although all the items, particularly wages, of operating expenses have been largely increased in the last ten years, the average increase being not less than 40 per cent above what it was ten years ago, still no increase whatever has been made in the rate of fare. On the contrary, during these ten years, the transportation facilities have been greatly increased. In view, therefore, of the greatly increased cost of operation and the failure of the company to receive a sufficiently increasing patronage, the management feels that the action taken herein is the only possible solution if the lines are to be continued in operation.

Assistant Pastor

With impressive services Newell C.
Maynard, assistant to Rev. H. Grant Person, pastor of Eliot congregational church, was ordained to the ministry at a council held at the church last Friday.

Rev. Dr. David N. Beach, president of Bangor theological seminary, preached the sermon, following Scripture reading by Rev. Mr. Person. The ordaining prayer was by Rev. Dr. Cornelius H.
Patton, the charge to Mr. Maynard was made by Rev. Dr. George T. Smart of Newton Highlands and the right hand of fellowship was extended by Rev.
Henry E. Oxnard.

The first service performed by Rev.
Mr. Maynard after his ordination was the offering of benediction at the close of the council.

Rev. Mr. Maynard was born in Marshfield, Me., Nov. 26, 1880. He attended Machias high school and completed his preparatory course at Bucksport seminary. In 1904 he entered Bangor theological seminary, from which he was recently graduated. He first became active in church work at the age of 16.
Three years later he did his first preaching. In addition to doing considerable supply work throughout Maine while attending Bangor theological seminary
he also held two pastorates, one at Milford and another at Lincoln. While in Bangor he successfully carried on the work of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. This spring he accepted a

The Fourth In Newton

In its 24th annual celebration, which began at 10 yesterday morning with a baseball game between the married and single men on the playground, the Newton Centre improvement association did itself proud. The benedictors were the victors, 13 to 8. With Charles Mitchell umpiring the teams lined up as follows:

Sias lb. Claflin 2b. Spaulding 3b. Chandler ss. King rf. Vales of and Rising lf.

While the ball game was in progress sports were run off on the playground track, the winners receiving handsome cups from the improvement association.

During the afternoon there was an exhibition of tennis playing on the courts of the Newton Centre square tennis club. In the singles R. Chauncey Seaver, state champion, played Richard Bishop, the crack B. A. A. player, while in the doubles there were exhibition matches between Bishop and Gardner Bemis and Plimpton and Johnson. The matches were watched by many spectators.

In the evening during a band concert there were water sports for boys at Crystal lake. For nearly two hours there was a display of fireworks from a pier built at the westerly side of the lake, the usual plan of having the fireworks in the middle of the lake being abandoned because of accidents in past years.

The committee in charge of the Newton Centre celebration consisted of J. G.
Andrews, chairman, Sumner Clement,
M. F. Buckley, Morton E. Cobb, William H. Rice, T. B. Plimpton and Lawrence W. Davis, and it was pronounced one of the best in many years.

The celebration at Nonantum began with a flag raising in the forenoon on the lot adjoining the new schoolhouse in process of construction on Crescent st.
following a mammoth bonfire arranged by the Nonantum A. A. and ignited at midnight. The day's events were under the auspices of the Nonantum improvement association.

The flag was thrown to the breeze by Miss Hanlon, the little daughter of John Hanlon, and was greeted with prolonged applause. With Alderman William J.
Doherty as master of ceremonies the program at the raising consisted of an address of welcome by Pres. W. S.
Bowen of the improvement association, an oration by James S. Cannon which won warm applause and an address by Pres. Timothy E. Kenslea of the Nonantum A. A. In a ball game which took place in the morning the Nonantum A. A. team was defeated by the Empire laundry machine company's team, 10 to 1. Eastman and King were the battery for the winners, with Tabal-di and Bergen the battery for Nonantum A. A.

In the afternoon the Nonantum married men beat the single men, 16 to 12,
on the playground in a spirited contest.
Michael Barry took his life in his own hands and inspired the strenuous New-m, which the single men afterward good-naturedly claimed to be the cause of their defeat. The teams lined up as follows:

Married men—William Hanson p. Edward Kenslea c. John Hanlon lb. Con-Dalton 2b. Thomas Farrell 3b. Michael Kenslea ss. James O'Donnell lf. William Dalton cf. Edward Murphy rf.

Single men—E. E. Murphy p. John Barley c. Michael Flaherty lb. E. For-mail 2b. Thomas Kenslea 3b. John Garrity ss. Peter McGrady lf. Bert Kilburn
cf. and Thomas Halfrey rf.

On the playground there were two interesting races in which the winners were awarded valuable prizes. An 100-yard dash was won by Fisher with Smith second. A dash of the same distance for boys under 16 was won handily by John Beaudrot with Louis Dooley second.

Fireworks and a band concert during the evening brought the celebration to a fitting close. The committee having charge of the celebration consisted of Alderman William J. Doherty, W. S.
Bowen, J. W. Murphy, James S. Cannon, Dr. E. A. Mayall, William H.
Thomas, William Hanson, Timothy E.
Kenslea and John Hanlon.

Yesterday morning the children living in the Eliot district held their annual parade of grotesques, marching to Newton Highlands and returning. Sports for the little folk followed during the afternoon and there was a fireworks display in the evening.

The Brae Brun country club, West Newton, entertained many guests last evening with one of the most elaborate fireworks displays seen here, in which numerous amusing set pieces were features. While the display was in progress there was a band concert.

But one serious accident occurred in this city yesterday as a result of celebrating the holiday.

Thomas G. Fuller, a carpenter living at 169 Cypress street, Newton Centre, had three fingers blown off his right hand in the forenoon while handling a cannon cracker, and it is thought that a fourth finger may have to be amputated. Fuller had lighted a cannon cracker and thrown it onto the ground. As it did not explode immediately he believed the fuse had gone out and picked up the cracker. No sooner had he taken it up but it exploded, taking off three fingers.
Fuller was taken into his house and attended by a local doctor.

Few arrests were made yesterday for violating city ordinances in celebrating the holiday, but two persons being held on this charge. There were also two arrests for disturbance. When policemen started to disperse a crowd of early celebrators in Nonantum, before daylight, Thomas J. Higgins, 19 years old, a painter living at 19 Murphy ct, is charged, grabbed a pair of handcuffs belonging to patrolman Goode and ran away. After a lively chase he was caught and is held on a charge of larceny.

There were several thousand canoeists on the river during the afternoon and early evening. Many made an all day outing, having luncheon on the shaded banks. But one tipover occurred. This was at 7 in the evening when a canoe occupied by a young man and woman turned turtle near Norumbega in shallow water. The couple reached the bank with little difficulty and dried their clothing in the Metropolitan police station.

Fireworks set fire to the house of C.
G. Magee, 17 Carey avenue, at 8:30 last night, for which an alarm was sounded from box 48. Firemen extinguished the blaze, entailing only slight damage.
Early in the morning the firemen were called out on two false alarms, which it is believed were sounded by boys.

Sudden Death

Fred Johnson, aged 47, living at Newton Lower Falls and employed as a section foreman, dropped dead at 10:15 yesterday morning in the Riverside railroad station.

Death was caused by heart trouble.
Medical Examiner George L. West viewed the remains. Johnson had been employed for many years as a section foreman on the Boston & Albany railroad, and was well known among railroad men and Newton Lower Falls.
He is survived by a wife and two children.

—Stanwood Cobb, second son of Darius Cobb, the artist, has received the appointment of teacher in English and Latin at Roberts College, Constantinople, for three years. Mr. Cobb graduated at Dartmouth with highest honors, and for two years past had been at Harvard Divinity School. He will spend the season in Great Britain and Germany, where he will receive the hospitality of prominent residents.

Recently something was lost in one of the Lowell schools in the primary grade, and the teacher was obliged to make an investigation in order to locate the article. One of the smaller boys was asked to show the contents of his pockets and he laid on her desk the following collection: Wooden whistle, spool, apple, pair of gloves, pencil, rubber, key, five matches, five nails, jackknife, imitation $10 bill, four advertisements of a 10-cent show, list of soaps, top and string, eraser, note-book, three post cards, dirty handkerchief, bobbin, rubber band, doctor's prescription, pile of spelling papers, wrapper of a roll of lozenges, two toothpicks and two mirrors.

A curious freak of nature is reported in Jacksonwald, Penn. From the side of an old apple tree grows a big red apple. The fruit springs directly from the bark without branch or twig. Last spring the tenant noticed a small bud, which he did not disturb. Presently a small apple formed and this fall it is perfect in shape and very large. Farmers declare that they never saw an apple grow out of the bark before and many have driven miles to see it.

A curious custom connected with the Serbian army is the manner in which most of the regiments carry the big drum. It is not, as in most countries, slung in front of the man who plays it,
but is placed upon a small two-wheeled cart drawn by a large dog, which has been so trained that it keeps its place even through the longest and most tedious of marches. The drummer takes up a position behind the cart and performs on the instrument as it moves along.

A rather unusual marriage took place in Lee the other evening when Nelson Weeks, 69, who has been critically ill for several days before, was married to Mrs. Nellie Pierson Harris, 39. Rev.
Jesse Ackerman of the Lee Methodist church performed the ceremony, the bridegroom being unable to stand, but being bolstered up in bed while the ceremony was going through with. Mr.
Weeks, who is a mason by trade, formerly lived in Stockbridge.

It is not the site of a town, but its character that makes it a desirable place to live. A live, prosperous town is a desirable one to live in, and a town may prosper and yet be small. Every citizen in a town should be interested in its prosperity. One of the best ways to help a town is to speak well of it. It is true patriotism to stand by your own town, and interests that effect the town should effect every citizen.

Memorials to animals are fairly common but there is one in England existing inside a church. This is the effigy of a cow displayed in Durham cathedral. Tradition asserts that it was placed there in order to keep in remembrance the facts relating to the burial within the sacred edifice of the remains of St. Cuthbert.

For the first time on record there are brayers in the Maine legislature at the same time. George W. Irving represents Caribou in the senate and Athill E.
Irving represents Presque Isle in the lower house.

Thomas G. Sisson of Middleboro, a well-known hunter, claims the record for that place when it is a matter of coons. He had captured a dozen of them, the largest weighing 22 pounds, while the others ranged from that down to a pair of youngsters that weighed 10 pounds apiece.

Won by a Violin.

By EPES W. SARGENT.

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastment.

Avard clambered up through the trap leading from the music room with the same intolerable feeling of disgust that always filled his soul when it came time to take his place beside the leader of the Odeon orchestra.

He hated it all, the endless procession of sidewalk comedians, serio comics, sketch artists, trained dogs and all the other component parts of the vaudeville show.

He had come to America fresh from the conservatory, with visions of a concert tournee that should make him famous. They told him that America was a land of money; that there people sat up nights for an opportunity to hear some great artist.

Instead, he had discovered that only those heralded by a skillful promoter stood any chance. He was glad to get an occasional engagement for some small concerts, and even these grew less and less frequent as the season waned.

Then had come that awful time when, penniless and hungry, he faced the realization that he could never hope for success. He was too proud to go back home a failure, and he thankfully accepted an opening in a concert hall, where he, a pianist and a cornet player comprised the orchestra.

Benson had found him there one night when he dropped in to see the proprietor. Benson had played violin there himself before he had become a bandmaster, with a blue and gold band at a summer resort, and he dropped in at intervals for old times' sake.

He called Avard over to his table and offered him a place in his orchestra in the fall, when the season opened, so ever since September Avard had sat beside Benson playing first violin. He loathed it all, but it was better than the concert hall, and he was grateful.

But this afternoon he was gloomy. A great artist, one with whom he had studied, was giving a matinee, and some one had told him how the people were thronging to the hall. Their master had declared Avard to be the better, yet Herman drew the crowds.

Monday was always a bad day. The music sheets, some of them yellow with age and filthy with dirt, were hard to read. Rehearsal had been more or less of a farce, and he scarcely noticed the performance. Then suddenly a voice broke on his ears, and he looked up in wonder.

A mere girl stood in the gleam of the spot light. She could not be more than sixteen or seventeen, but from her throat there poured tones of crystal purity. The voice was unplaced and unschooled, but she had a natural gift for singing, and her tones had not yet become hardened through overwork.

The music thrilled him through and through, and once or twice he broke in his accompaniment. Long after she left the stage she still occupied his thoughts, and as he started to leave the theater after the matinee she confronted him at the top of the stairs.

"What did you crab my act for?" she demanded.

"I am sorry, mademoiselle," he said, with humility. "But such a voice—in vaudeville. The surprise was too great. I faltered."

"It looked as if you were scared," she agreed, mollified at the compliment. "But don't you do it again."

"I protest that I shall offend no more," he assured, and she turned to the elderly woman who hovered in the background.

"Come on, ma," she called. "He didn't do it a-purpose. I knocked him off his pins; that's all. Come on."

She passed out of the stage door, and Avard followed slowly. Into his life love had come. He could forgive the uncouth speech for the sake of the voice, and Gertrude Clayton, "phenomenal" (she invariably mispelled the word) soprano, had become a goddess to him.

All that week he drank in the flute-like tones, as a drunkard imbibes his tipple. Saturday night, when the engagement closed, he left a single rose, perfect in its loveliness, with the doorkeeper, to be given her as she left.

She was gone when the show was over, and he hurried to the doorkeeper for his report.

"What did mademoiselle say?" he demanded eagerly.

"Stingy," grinned the unsympathetic soul, and Avard slowly passed out.

But the slight was forgotten the next day, and only the memory of that perfect voice remained. From the press agent he begged one of her photographs, and when he came home at night, tired and disheartened, he looked upon her youthful face and seemed to hear again the liquid sweetness of her singing.

It was several months before she came again. Avard feared that perhaps the hard work, the singing in smoke filled music halls, had spoiled her tones, but she did not strain for high notes, and her voice retained its clarity and freshness.

It seemed an interminable time after he took his place before she came on, and again after her appearance the moments dragged wearily, but they were to be endured for the sake of those momentary uplifts to paradise, and he was content.

Several times, when the sketches were on, he left his place and provided about the stage in the hope of gaining speech with her, but she always was dressed and out before the sketch brought him an intermission from his labors.

As the week progressed these repeated disappointments preyed upon him, and he grew more and more gloomy. Saturday night came all too soon, and it was with an aching heart that he opened her music to play her accompaniment for the last time.

Gertrude had put in a new song to try the last night. It was a popular ballad, one that had just come out, cheaply constructed, but with a slow melodic chorus. They had tried it over in the music room before the performance, and he had liked it then. Now the melody seemed to fill his heart, and he put all of his artistic soul into the interpretation of the chorus. The other musicians, as if by common impulse, lowered their instruments, and the wailing tones of the violin formed such a perfect accompaniment to the voice that the audience suddenly grew quiet. Twice the chorus was repeated, and the bathos of the words became pathos when sung to the sobbing accompaniment of the violin. Now the chorus was ended, and the singer looked up expectantly.

For a moment the audience sat silent as if in the presence of death. Then a great outburst of applause swept down from the gallery, to be met with a demonstration from the lower floor.

Three times Benson played over the "ramp"—the short symphony between the verses—before the house became quiet again. Then Gertrude began, and the house was hushed. At the chorus the other players settled back, and once more the duet between violin and voice thrilled the hearers. Again the applause thundered out. The singer bowed repeatedly, but still the hand clapping continued, and she leaned over the footlights. "Get up and take a bow," she shouted. "Push him up, Benson."

The leader guided Avard to his feet, and he stood there, abashed by the sensation he had created. Three times they repeated the double chorus, and even then the stage manager had to ring up in the next act and hold the curtain up before the house would quiet down.

Presently the call boy poked his head through the trap and handed a note to Benson. He turned to Avard. "Miss Clayton wants to see you in her dressing room," he said. "Never mind this act. I can get along."

Weak and trembling from the reaction, Avard slipped out of the orchestra pit and presently presented himself before the singer.

"What's your name?" she demanded curiously.

"Pierre Avard," he said hesitatingly.

"Sounds good for the bills," she said critically. "Say, we'd make a great team, something like the three Diamonds' stunt—street singers, you know. I'll fix Benson all right. Will you come?"

"Mademoiselle wishes my services?" he asked haltingly, unwilling to believe that such good fortune could be true.

"Sure thing," she confirmed. "We stopped the show. We'll be headliners. Want to double up?"

"Double up?" he repeated wonderingly. "Mademoiselle does me the honor of proposing a matrimonial alliance?"

Gertrude eyed him curiously. To double up meant to form a team. Then an idea came to her. "I guess so," she answered carelessly. "I'll keep some other dame from getting her books on you."

Benson summed up the situation later over his nightcap.

"It's a good thing for both of them," he declared oracularly. "He'll keep her straight and do something with her voice. He's too much in love with her to realize what a silly little fool she is. By the time she's really ready to fall in love he'll be there to be fallen in love with. Here's luck to 'em."

And they all drained their glasses.

Animals Never Commit Suicide.

I do not believe that animals ever commit suicide. I do not believe that they have any notions of death, or take any note of time, or ever put up any bluff game, or ever deliberate together, or form plans, or forecast the seasons. They may practice deception, as when a bird feigns lameness or paralysis to decoy you away from her nest, but this, of course, is instinctive and not conscious deception. There is at times something that suggests co-operation among them, as when wolves hunt in relays, as they are said to do, or when they hunt in couples, one engaging the quarry in front, while the other assaults it from the rear, or when quail roost upon the ground in a ring, their tails to the center, their heads outward, or as when cattle or horses form a circle when attacked in the open by wild beasts, the cattle with their heads outward and the horses with their heads in. Of course all this is instinctive and not the result of deliberation. The horse always turns his tail to the storm as well, and cows and steers, if I remember rightly, turn their heads.—John Burroughs in Outing.

It Puzzled Him.

"When going through a big apartment house the other day looking for a friend I came across something funny," said the busy woman. "I read the names of all the tenants on the doors as I passed from floor to floor, and by and by I came to one card that said, 'J. Fitzgerald and wife.' I have been puzzling over since over the significance of that card. Had J. Fitzgerald recently taken unto himself a wife, and was he anxious to advertise the fact, or had Mrs. Fitzgerald a mind of her own, and did she insist upon recognition, or—but I give it up. What did it mean anyhow?"—New York Globe.

Dad Murphy's Bravery.

Old Dad Murphy, as he was affectionately known to the boys on the road, was a conductor on a trunk line transporting large shipments of live stock from the west. Dad had been in the service so long that the rules of railroading had become second nature to him, and the result of the superintendent's frequent orders to the trainmen to answer with military brevity all questions and messages, especially those by telegraph, to relieve the burden on the wires had reduced Dad to habitually short, concise replies, even to his conversation. On a baking hot July day, when not a breath of air was stirring and the sun beat on the car roofs till the pitch pulled the soles off the brakemen's shoes, Dad in looking over the train discovered that eight hogs had succumbed to the heat.

When passing the next telegraph station he threw off a message to the superintendent:

BURBANS, Supt.—Eight hogs dead acc't heat, advise. MURPHY, No. 78.

At the second telegraph office he received his answer:

MURPHY, Condr. 78.—What is the present condition of the hogs? Ans. ok. BURBANS.

Dad grunted, shifted his quid of fine cut and wrote as follows:

BURBANS, Supt.—Hogs still dead. MURPHY, 78.

What He Lost.

A traveling man was leaning against the counter in the hotel gazing disconsolately at the floor.

"Lose something?" queried the hotel clerk.

A nod of the head answered. "Was it very valuable?"

"Twice as much," he said.

"Sure you had it when you came in here?"

A third nod. His face was growing wistful.

"You should have put it in the safe."

"Could not have done that very well."

His voice quivered.

The clerk stretched his neck and gasped, "Why, what was it?"

"It was," the traveling man began, but he choked—"It was—my job."

"Oh, pardon me a minute, the phone is ringing." And the clerk slipped softly away. A dismal stillness reigned.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Onion as a Disinfectant.

There is, writes a London correspondent, a stintum of common sense in the advice given by a north country teacher to her scholars, "If you have cholera or scarlet fever in the house, put some onions under the bed and they will sweep away all disease." For the onion proved its virtue in a remarkable way years ago, when cholera raged throughout London. It was noticed with surprise that one of the most insular districts—Saffron Hill and its neighborhood—was almost exempt from the visitation. The majority of the inhabitants being Italians were great onion eaters, and strings of this vegetable were found suspended from the ceiling in nearly every room. The medical officer of health concluded that the onion, among its many virtues, contains a powerful antidote against cholera morbus and possibly other diseases.

Hugo and Verdi.

Verdi labored long before he persecuted Victor Hugo, who was vexed that the tragic beauties of his "Le Roi S'Amuse" had been turned into operatic effects, to attend a performance of "Rigoletto." He succeeded at length, and Hugo sat in the box with the composer and listened to the opera. But not a word did he speak. Verdi's impatience got the better of him, and he asked:

"Well, what say you—about the quartet, for instance?"

"Show me a way in which four persons can be permitted to speak simultaneously," replied the poet, "and I will write something more beautiful than your quartet."

Early Dentistry.

The art of dentistry was practiced among the Egyptians and Etruscans, and there are evidences in mummies and skulls that in very ancient times teeth were filled and efforts were made to supply the loss of natural by artificial teeth. The first writer on the treatment of diseased teeth was Galen. The science was introduced into America by John Greenwood, who established himself in New York in 1788. In 1799 and again in 1795 he carved in ivory an entire set of teeth for General Washington.

A Fish Story.

"Trout protection! Nonsense!" said a gunner of local eminence. "Trout are amply able to protect themselves. Look at their depredations among ducks, for example, and you will agree with me that it's the birds that need protection. It's a common thing for a trout to jump from the water, seize a duck by the neck, drag the unfortunate fowl into the depths sufficiently to leave its feet sticking in the air, where it can get no purchase upon the universe, and thus drown it. Then the trout picks the feathers from the bird, eats it at its leisure and swims away out of the jurisdiction of the courts. Are there any fishermen? None? Too bad. This would be a match for one of their fish stories."—Philadelphia Record.

English Plum Pudding.

For English plum pudding clean, wash and dry a pound of currants; stone a pound of raisins. Mix the currants, raisins, a pound of suet, chopped fine, three-quarters of a pound of stale bread crumbs, a quarter of a pound of brown sugar, the grated rind of a lemon, half a pound of minced candied orange peel, a quarter of a pound of flour, half of a grated nutmeg. Beat five eggs, add to them half a pint of orange juice, then pour over the dry ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pack into greased small kettles or molds. This will make about six pounds. Boil ten hours. Serve with hard sauce.

A Carlyle Comment.

A gentleman once happened to visit Carlyle just after a brilliant man of genius had left him. As they met at the door the man of genius said: "I have just been visiting poor Carlyle. He is a mere wreck, a mere wreck."

As the second visitor greeted Carlyle he remarked, "So you've just had Mr. — with you?" "Yes," was the answer of the "mere wreck," "and he thinks God Almighty never made such another!"

The Surprise.

Grandma—Were you surprised to have me come and visit you? Johnny—Not so surprised as mamma was. Grandma—Why, she knew I was coming. Johnny—Yes; what she was surprised at was papa's language when she told him about it.—Cleveland Leader.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—The program prepared for Keith's next week looks as though it might provide an ideal summer entertainment, for it is made up of light, bright, breezy features, without a dramatic sketch or a serious turn in the whole number. Elsie Fay, that vivacious comedienne whose name will always be associated with her famous portrayal of "The Belle of Avenue A", will make merry in her jolly way. A notable debut will be that of Viola Gillette, who has been the principal boy in all the big pantomime productions during the past few years, and George MacFarlane, one of the best baritone vocalists ever heard in musical comedy, in a skit they call "A Little Musical Nonsense." Julius Tanneau, that clever mimic and all-around entertainer, is to deliver his latest collection of jests and songs. The Bellows Brothers give a most sensational series of cycle stunts, while the Camille Trio's comedy act is one of the most laughable turns of the age. There is no better musical act in vaudeville than that of the Exposition Four, made up of the three Alexander Brothers and Brady. They are dancers and vocalists as well as instrumentalists. Another artist to make her debut in Boston vaudeville will be Beth Stone, whose dancing made such a hit in "The Little Cherub." Hibbert and Warren, comedians and dancers. "Paganini's Ghost," a musical novelty. Le Fevre and St. John, in a lively little skit; the D'Elmar brothers, comedy acrobats; Shungovani, the Indian magician; Winifred Stewart, singing comedienne, and the Kinetograph will complete the program. The Faddettes are to commence their annual engagement on Monday, July 29th.

Normubega Park—The greatest vaudeville bill ever presented in the covered open-air theatre at Normubega Park, will be the attraction during the coming week. This is a strong statement but it is also the truth, for although there have been many great programs at this wonderful open-air theatre, this bill for the coming week eclipses all past attempts at a show. The special feature is, of itself, the greatest single attraction ever presented in this theatre. It is Fontinelle, "The Mystery" and the word "It" is used adverbially for the act may be summed up with the words "What is It?" But Fontinelle is only one of the attractions on this great vaudeville bill. The only Chinese vocalist in vaudeville, Lee Tung Foo, is also on the program. Bunth and Rudd, famous from one end of the world to the other, as the original grotesque comedians, dancers, jugglers, pantomimists and burlesque artists, are also on the bill. They offer an endless variety of novelties "from the old world." The Bartelli troupe have a new act which is about the best of its kind. Their ground and lofty tumbling & head balancing is phenomenal. The komograph concludes this remarkable program. All the regular features of the park are as popular as ever.

Street Railway Notes

According to Gen. Man. Matthew C. Brush the Newton street railway company does not look for any serious trouble with its employees in Waltham, where it is reported that a strike is being agitated.

The trouble grew out of the arrest recently and sentencing to 40 days in the house of correction of a conductor convicted of larceny of fares," said Gen. Man. Brush. "Four men on the Waltham division have resigned and six others have been discharged for excellent reasons," said he. "It is our policy to deal with our employees individually and I have never refused to see any man who has ever been connected with the road, no matter what position he occupied. The rumor that the company intends to discharge its old employees is absolute falsehood," he continued. "The more experience our men have the better we are satisfied. Neither do we intend to discharge any other employees."

"We have received no complaint that any of the men are dissatisfied with their pay, and we are willing to talk with any employee. The road pays 20 cents an hour the first year up to 25 cents an hour the 10th year. This is practically the same rate paid by the Boston & Worcester and the Boston & Northern roads, the latter being an organized union road. We have a good number of men drawing the highest rate of 25 cents an hour."

The rumor that there was to be a sweeping discharge of old employees while entirely untrue has aroused discontent among many of the men, which we greatly regret," concluded Gen. Man. Brush.

There was a mass meeting of the employees of the Newton Street Railway Company at Waltham last Saturday evening.

The meeting was held for the purpose, as explained by the presiding officer, to call attention to the alleged unjust conditions under which employees are working, also to take action to have employees reinstated who were recently discharged.

Speeches were made by Austin Kaveney of the Waltham C. L. U., Ralph Orr of Detroit, Mich., Edward Cowen, state president Federation of Labor, P. Sheehan, of Brockton and M. J. Walsh of Quincy.

All of the speakers stated plainly that it was the hope of the employees as well as union officials to settle the differences in a peaceful way, although they were equally strong in their declaration that the employees had a perfect right to form an organization without interference by the company.

A resolution was then read in substance as follows: "That the employees are obliged to work on this line for lower than the average wages; that their work covers a period of 16 to 18 hours daily; that men were discharged for no other reason than forming an organization; and it was resolved that the action of the company be condemned by the meeting and that a committee be appointed to confer with officials of the company in view of having the men reinstated."

The resolution was adopted and the committee was appointed as follows: P. P. Adams, John J. Burns, Esq., Thomas F. Kearns, Esq., and James T. Riley.

Famous Anagrams.

Of all the extravagances caused by the anagrammatic fever when many years ago it was at its height, none comes up to that of a Frenchman named Andre Pujon, who, discovering in his name the anagram Pendu a Rion (the seat of criminal justice in the province of Auvergne), felt bound to fulfill his destiny, committed a crime in Auvergne and was actually hanged in the place to which the omen pointed.

Among the papers of William Oldys, the bibliographer, was found the following anagram on himself: In word and will I am a friend to you, And one friend old is worth a hundred new.

The Father Pierre de St. Louis became a Carmelite monk on finding out that his lay name, Ludovicus Bartelemi, gave the anagram Carmelo se devotus, and Sylvester, in dedicating a translation of Du Bartas to his sovereign, made the following anagram: "James Stuart-A just master."—Minneapolis Journal.

Trapping an Elephant.

"Elephants are easily trapped," said a zoo keeper, "very easily trapped and very easily tamed. The trapper chooses a spot popular with elephants and digs a hole five feet deep and twenty feet square. He surrounds this hole with a high board fence except in one place, where he hangs a swing gate. Next he finds a herd of elephants, chooses the animal he wants, maddens it and makes it chase him. The man tears along on his nag, the elephant thunders close after, and just at the gateway the man swerves to the right, but the elephant, too heavy to swerve, hangs right on through into the hole. He's mad at first, terribly mad. But they give him no food or drink, they build around the pit fires of damp wood that almost suffocate him with smoke, and they daze and stupefy him with shouts and banging of brass pans. The elephant is completely broken and subdued in three or four days. He comes forth and follows the trapper humbly and timidly, with tears in his eyes."

A Boy and a Thousand Dollars.

A New York judge gave his son $1,000, telling him to go to college and graduate. The son returned at the end of freshman year without a dollar and with several ugly habits. At the close of the vacation the judge told his son that he had done all he could for him. If he had wasted the money that was to have taken him through college, he might as well leave home and make his own way in the world. It was a rude awakening for the young man, but he knew that his father was right. And so strong was the good influence of his upright father that he did leave home to go to work in downright earnest. He went back to college, made his way through, graduated at the head of his class, studied law, became governor of the state of New York, entered the cabinet of the president of the United States and made a record for himself that the country will not willingly let die. It was William H. Seward.

Newton Man Honored

John Hermann Loud of 154 Oakleigh road, organist at the First Baptist church, Newton Centre, is one of the few persons in New England to receive a fellowship from the American guild of organists.

The fellowship is the highest distinction which can be conferred upon an organist in the United States. The honor is awarded as a result of particularly exacting examinations held in New York. The number of persons throughout the country who have passed the qualifications is comparatively small.

Mr. Loud is well known in musical circles particularly in eastern Massachusetts. He is a native of Weymouth, where he was born Aug. 26, 1873, a son of John J. Loud. He is a direct descendant of colonial stock. He is the oldest of eight children. After receiving his early education in the public schools of Weymouth he was graduated from Thayer academy, South Braintree, in 1893. It had been his intention to enter Harvard, from which university his father was graduated in 1866, but he changed his early plans and went abroad to study music instead.

In Berlin he studied the organ six months under Franz Grunke and composition under Heinrich Urban, the teacher of Josef Hoffman. Later he went to Paris and studied under Alexandre Guilmant, one of the greatest living organists. In 1895 he left Paris for England, where he studied harmony, counterpoint, choir training and the theory of music in general under the direction of J. Varley Roberts. At Easter of that year he was admitted as an associate of the Royal College of Music, receiving a certificate signed by Albert Edward, Prince of Wales. He was the first American to receive this degree.

After four months in England Mr. Loud returned to Boston and in the autumn gave a recital in the Ruggles-st church playing for the first time in this country Guilmant's fifth sonata. Horatio Parker was so much impressed with his playing that he engaged Mr. Loud to take his place in Trinity church while absent in the south. Mr. Loud opened a studio in Boston, where he taught until April, 1896, when he became organist at the First Congregational church in Springfield. For a few years he has been organist of the First Baptist church, Newton Centre.

Besides holding membership in the distinguished English society Mr. Loud is a member of the American guild of organists and the society of Musical composers.

Man Killed

The gruesome find of a man's head lying beside the New York Central railroad tracks near Riverside station at 3:40 Saturday morning by a freight train crew instigated a search which revealed the mangled body of John H. O'Brien, aged about 50, of Natick, scattered along the tracks.

O'Brien was seen about the Riverside station the night before in company with an unknown man. According to a railroad employe they came out from Boston on a late circuit train and alighted at Riverside to await the late train to Natick.

With his companion O'Brien was seen to walk down the tracks of the main line a short distance from the junction. Soon the other man, who is described as being middle aged, came back to the station and when the train arrived he boarded it.

Nothing more was seen of O'Brien until a freight train came past Riverside at 3:40 Saturday morning and stopped some little distance from the station. Glancing out of the caboose window a brakeman was startled to see a human head lying beside the tracks. The police and Medical Examiner West were at once notified, and the remains were taken to the Newton hospital morgue, where an autopsy was performed.

O'Brien's legs and arms were also severed, and the body was ground into small pieces. There was about $100 in his clothing, but his watch, coat and hat were missing. Attached to the watch chain was a charm bearing the initials "J. H. O'Brien" and the inscription "Natick council 69, K of C." In his clothing was a rent receipt bearing his name.

O'Brien was employed as a foreman in Pratt's shoe shop, Natick, and his home was at 37 East Central street, that town.

Secure Desk Room Early

On Tuesday, Sept. 3, the fall term will begin at Burdett College, 18 Boylston St., Boston. This is the school of "Actual Business from the Start," where students do not theorize about business, but actually DO the things which they will continue to do after they enter counting-room life. So great is the demand from business men for Burdett students that it is far in excess of the supply. Each graduate receives not only a diploma, but also a certificate of Free Life Membership in the Situation Department. The cost for tuition at Burdett College is $37.50 per term. The elegant new catalogue for 1907-08 will soon be ready for free distribution. Prospective students should send for a copy and secure a seat for the opening day of school.

From figures given out from the state house this week Newton will pay a handsome addition to its metropolitan assessments over that of 1906. The increase in the park assessment was to be expected as we had a substantial rebate last year under the new apportionment, and the present figures are what we must expect in the future, provided the legislature doesn't authorize free lunches or other nonsensical amusements and attractions in the metropolitan reservations. The increase in the sewer assessment is said to be due to an "adjustment" which expert accountants have made in the books of the state treasurer, and of which Newton stands about 15 per cent. One of the strange things about the book keeping of the grand old Commonwealth is the plan of keeping back the real figures of cost and maintenance until the work is in full operation and then springing on the tax paying municipalities, unexpected and usually heavy assessments. While we may growl about the payments there is nothing to do but to meet them and wait for the state officials to call again. The present method in all matters relating to metropolitan work is taxation without representation.

Last year's heavy increase in the county tax was attributed to the cost of the Tucker trial, but this year goes nearly two thousand dollars more than last, and here, again, the city must meet the demand, without valid protest.

The total of all these assessments, added to the figures for the city tax, make a tidy sum for the tax payer to contemplate. The tax bill next fall, we fear, will not be a very powerful argument for continued residence in the metropolitan district.

The trouble between the Newton street railway company and its employees is simply this. The men say that certain employees were recently discharged because they were members of the union, while the Company officials say they were discharged for definite cause. A strike on such trivial differences and its subsequent inconvenience to the travelling public would be an outrage.

We call the following extracts from an interesting letter from a Newton resident now travelling in the West. The letter was received from Dodge City, Kansas.

"This town is on the western edge of the wheat belt—beyond this it does not amount to much—but they raise large quantities of sugar beets—mellon seed—under the irrigating ditches. At Laking, a corporation has built a large basin—5 miles long and 2 miles wide at extremity and from that, canals and laterals carry water to the farms—this is a new proposition. The U. S. government has built at Deerfield a large brick pumping station to pump water from artesian wells to canals, etc.—this is just started. At Garden City there was built last year an enormous sugar beet (brick) factory which has contracted with growers this year to pay $5 per ton for beets. All of this industry means much for this dry country. Water—water is the stumbling block in its career—but the land especially in this Arkansas River Valley is very fine and green. But back only two miles on either side of the river are the sand hills, which extend from four to twelve miles back, but beyond the hills is some of the finest of level lands which are now much in demand. This country is in its infancy.

Ever since I left home have had hot weather. It is different heat than what we have in Boston. It is dry hot heat during the day, and without tree shade, except shade of house, where it is 95 degrees. The air is dancing and dazling, but the nights are cool and with exception of two nights have had blankets over me.

Corn is very backward, only knee high (should be waist high at this time of season they tell me). It looks uneven and weedy, but the farmers are now cultivating and nursing it along. Oats look to be a fair stand, short stem, but good size heads, it is backward and still green. What in Western Kansas will be about a half crop, compared with last year's big crop—but the farmers will get more dollars than last year. But those who were frosted in May will lose all—too bad—it looked very promising early in the season. Now they are beginning to cut the good wheat in mean time, they watch every cloud, they dread hail. We ran (on train) into a hail storm yesterday afternoon at Deerfield. I saw the ground spotted white with hail big as filberts. I bet they had damage there. So you see farmers have much to contend with. I met a man today who has 1500 acres in fine stand of wheat, just beginning to cut. He told me he is so nervous he cannot sleep nights—afraid of hail.

Kansas, as a whole, does not feel good. They are "crop struck." Are selling lands, not buying. They feel that some financial trouble may strike them, so are very cautious. Much different from one year ago. This over cautiousness may be a good position to take—it means a chance to breathe, rest, etc.

On the other hand the Santa Fe (Old Arch) is doing an enormous business, especially passenger. Every train is full, hard to get a seat, if one gets on at a way station. The equipment is the very best and service cannot be beat unless on the Penn. R. R. Santa Fe does not run dining cars, but every one or two hundred miles, have dining hotels, where everybody leaves the train and go into the dining room and get a fine dinner for 75c. Better than you could get in Boston for $1.25, while their lunch counters give the very best at reasonable rates. They are known as the "Harvey Houses."

I leave here this afternoon for Bucklin, Meade and Liberal and hope to get back to Hutchinson about Saturday, when I will strike west again, but go northwest to Dighton and Ness city. You can see by the map that after I leave Liberal I shall work in a northerly direction and get out of Kansas via northern tier of counties to Lincoln and Omaha, then home.

This town—Dodge City—is now a quiet, law abiding, prosperous town, but 30 years ago—yes, 20 years—it was the toughest cow boy proposition on the map. How strange—but it marks the everlasting progress of education, the energy of the American People who are building up this wonderful country of ours. Travel. Seeing is believing.

An Enjoyable Sail

With so many excursion steamers leaving Boston daily, it is sometimes difficult to choose which trip to take. For a short sail, however, one will make no mistake, the trip to Nahant or Bass Point is chosen. The opening of the Bass Point and Nahant season has attracted thousands of people for the sail on the "General Lincoln" and the "Governor Andrew."

Since the Bass Point line purchased these steamers from the Nantasket line, they have been altered and refitted and generally improved. With the improved boat service, the sail to Bass Point has become extremely popular. Bass Point itself has many attractions, not least among them the fish dinners that the hotels and restaurants are serving there. The new location of the Bass Point line in Boston is at Otis Wharf, 408 Atlantic avenue, a few doors from the Rowe's Wharf elevated station.

The Fourth at Waban

The cast sidlers battery went off on a fishing trip: result a walk over for the wild and woolly west. The score was about 2 to 1, but rather more than that. For the winners Whitaker proved a find and pitched good ball. P. Hill caught and threw splendidly. Sawyer made some splendid catches on hard balls, and "Doc" Parker was a bright star at short-stop, playing a great game. Hill, Sawyer and Williamson shared the batting honors. For the east, Cap. D. Hill, Oakes and Strong were the stars; while Paterson pitched creditably and Rane caught well when they went in. Robinson led at the bat with 1000 average and Hill and Rane hit the ball hard. Many humorous costumes added to the fun and the audience was large and enthusiastic.

In the afternoon a mixed doubles tournament was played off on the tennis courts and for enthusiasm and excitement was easily the "best ever." The entry list was unexpectedly large, most of the matches were close and well played and the gallery filled the grounds adding color and gaiety to the scene.

Mr. and Mrs. Rane proved the strongest pair as many had predicted. Their play was steady and consistent and they had little trouble in winning their first two matches. The surprise of the tournament was the work of Miss Knott and Mr. Robinson, the runners up. They were not regarded as possibilities, but won their way to the finals in two hard matches. The finals were hotly and stubbornly contested and both pairs played themselves out, as the closeness of the score indicated, 6-8, 7-5, 7-5.

In the evening a display of fireworks brought the whole village together again on the new ball field. Altogether the committee, Mrs. D. M. Hill, C. H. Cook and E. H. Robinson, with the great aid of the weather man made the 4th the most successful yet in the annals of Waban.

Motorman Held

Peter H. J. King, the motorman in charge of the electric car which bumped into conductor D. E. Lebonite last week on Commonwealth avenue, resulting in Lebonite's death several days later, was arraigned on a charge of manslaughter in the police court Monday morning.

King pleaded not guilty. By agreement the case was continued today. Later King was admitted to bail, the amount being fixed at $500, which was furnished by General Manager M. C. Brush.

The accident occurred about 4:30 in the afternoon on the boulevard line near Exeter street, West Newton. Lebonite had climbed onto the rear fender of his car to adjust the trolley when the electric in charge of King bumped into him.

King is 27 years old and resides at 14 Myrtle avenue, Auburndale. It is said that he has been employed by the Newton street railway company for some little time.

The remains of Lebonite were yesterday taken to Middleboro, Vt., his native place.

Vacation Schools

Vacation schools at Newton Centre and Nonantum were opened Monday for a term of six weeks. There was a large registration and it is expected that the attendance will in a few days eclipse that of last year. Mrs. Blanche E. Hyde is supervisor. The teaching force at Newton Centre consists of Miss Mary M. Morse, Lawrence A. Sprague and Miss Sarah L. Bates. At Nonantum the teachers are Joseph E. Owens, Matthias Hollander, Miss Cora E. Bigelow, Miss Grace P. Gillette, Miss Sarah L. Blue, Miss Edith Hamilton, Miss Isabel H. Murray, Miss Amelia Gunther, Miss M. Louise Randall, Miss Bessie Hartshorne and Miss Mary McGrath. Basketry, cooking, sewing and similar studies will be taught.

Deer in Newton

A full grown deer made its appearance in the outskirts of Newton Centre Sunday afternoon and was given a lively chase. The animal finally made its escape into the woods near the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward on Dudley street.

The deer first appeared about 2:30 near the house of John Hurley, Hurley place, and Mr. Hurley was the first person to spy it. The deer took fright and ran into the woods. Hearing shots a few minutes later, which were probably fired by persons who had been chasing the animal from the opposite direction, he sent his son after the deer. The animal next came into the open near Dudley street, but was too fleet footed for its pursuers. It is thought here that the animal was wild, as none is known to be missing from any of the parks anywhere in this vicinity. This was the first time in many months that a deer has been seen running wild in this city, although one was seen a few weeks ago at Wellesley Farms.

CITY HALL NOTES

Miss Annette Bryson is the new clerk in the City Clerk's office.

A special meeting of the aldermen will be held Monday evening to consider financial matters.

From figures received here this week, it would seem as if an increase in the tax rate is inevitable. The state tax is $81,560, an increase of $11,210. The county tax is $71,954.39 an increase of $1,978.71. The metropolitan taxes are as follows: parks, $32,381.25 an increase of $15,887.42; sewers, $74,512, an increase of $17,469.17; water, $6,026, a decrease of $208.22; highway, $51,600 an increase of $4,497; grade crossings, $11,534.33, an increase of $2,957.82, and a new item of $1,587.82 for the bridge at Boylston street. The city appropriations are $1,135,207.21 an increase of $70,071.23 over 1906. These figures give a grand total of $1,414,809.08 an increase of $218,826.16 over last year. It is possible that there will be an increase of credits over 1906 so that the net increase to be raised by taxation will be from $90,000 to $100,000.

Munn-Woodin

A pretty wedding took place last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Woodin, 87 Cherry street, Waltham, when their daughter Harriet T. was united in marriage to Joseph B. Munn of Melrose Highlands, the ceremony being performed by Rev. C. H. Page, of that city, in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride was given away in marriage by her father, and the bridal party stood under an arch during the ceremony. The bridesmaid was Margaret E. Woodin, a sister of the bride, while Clarence Munn, a brother of the groom was best man. The ushers were George H. Hammond of Everett and Miss Sadie C. Bosworth of West Newton. Miss Harriet Munn, a sister of the groom presided at the piano. The bride was dressed in white crepe de chine trimmed with baby Irish lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid's dress was white muslin, and she carried pink carnations. At the close of the ceremony a reception was held.

Late in the evening the couple left for their honeymoon trip and upon their return will reside in Melrose Highlands. They were recipients of handsome as well as useful presents.

Clubs and Lodges

Garden City Lodge 182 A. O. U. W. of Newton was 13 years old last Tuesday evening and in honor of the occasion the members with Mike L. Feely, Master Workman, celebrated by having a ladies night.

To say that the affair was a success is putting it mild for Nonantum hall where the exercises were held was taxed to hold the crowd of workmen who attended. During the evening all present enjoyed a bountiful spread, and when the inner man had been satisfied, toast-master John Flood rapped to order and in his usual happy vein introduced the following speakers: G. M. W. James Reidy, G. F. Sullivan and others, who made interesting remarks. The program was made complete with songs and piano solos, after which the floor was cleared for dancing.

During the evening the degree staff gave an exhibition of degree work which was heartily enjoyed, and also presented the lodge with a banner of elegant design won by the lodge in Mechanics building. It was the most successful anniversary that Garden City Lodge 182 ever enjoyed.

A HAPPY BRIDE.

One of her wedding presents was a New Home Sewing Machine, she felt happy not only because she knew it to be the best that is made, but she was assured of doing the finest work possible with it. Dealers everywhere.

HER DAY OF FREEDOM.

By ROSALIE DAVIS.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

Grace Cramer received the news of her aunt's trifling illness with outward manifestations of regret and sympathy, but an inward feeling of exultation which she realized was, to say the least, ungrateful. Aunt Felice had been a patient, untiring, uncompromising chaperon for one long week.

"Tell Mrs. Cramer I hope she will be feeling very much better when I come back from a drive. Is there anything I could bring her—violets or perhaps roses?"

"Madam cannot endure perfume of any sort when she has one of these attacks, but I shall tell her of your kind thoughtfulness," said the precise, black-gowned maid, who had been in Mrs. Cramer's service for fifteen years.

Well trained and capable was this maid, but it never dawned upon her that she should personally see that Mrs. Cramer's order for the carriage was executed. Certainly this sturdy young woman from the west, only daughter of Mrs. Cramer's only brother, looked as if she were quite capable of giving her own orders.

And so it happened that the butler, not without some misgivings, held open the big walnut and bronze doors for Grace to pass out half an hour later and watched her walk briskly down the avenue.

At Thirty-fourth street she paused uncertainly. There were several points of interest she really wanted to see before returning home—the statue of Liberty, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and Grant's tomb. Of course New Yorkers were always bored with such things, but Grace was from the west and frankly interested in sightseeing. And such a morning as it was for sightseeing!

In front of the Waldorf-Astoria stood a line of hansoms. With deliberate steps and keen glances she turned her feet in their direction. The cabbies looked at her expectantly—sharp featured English drivers, heavy-jawed and red-eyed Irish drivers, a couple who looked as if they had sprung from the ghetto and one who caught and held her glance, smooth and boyish of face, smart and well-groomed of coat and hat. She stopped and looked up into his face, shielding her eyes with her long flat purse.

"How much?"

"Where, miss?" said the driver courteously.

"Oh, I don't know just where—by the hour, I guess."

"One-fifty for the first hour, a dollar an hour after that."

"All right. And first we'll go to the museum in the park."

He touched the front of his hat with his gloved fingers, and some rude young men lounging near the carriage started. Perhaps she had better not. Then she glanced up at the young man on the box. His gloved fingers were still against his hat, the doors were invitingly open, and though his face was quite grave, his eyes danced in a fashion very much in accordance with her own joy in being free from surveillance for a whole day.

She sprang into the hansom, and the doors clattered shut.

"How silly to be afraid!" she murmured. "Why, at home I go everywhere alone—and he is such a nice looking Irish boy."

"The nice looking Irish boy," gathering up his reins, turned his eyes on the group of rude laughing youths near the starter's booth, and in that look was a curious mingling of triumph and reproach.

They bowled through the park and drew up with a flourish in front of the museum. Grace sprang out.

"Oh, it is so much larger than I expected," she said, turning to the driver in frank surprise, not untiring with appeal. "I had no idea there was so much of it. You don't suppose I can begin to see it in half an hour or even an hour?"

The young man leaned respectfully from the box.

"Indeed you can't, miss. I've been here nearly every Sunday for the past three months, and I don't feel as if I'd seen the half of it yet."

"Oh, then you don't work on Sundays?"

The caddy flushed.

"After 6, miss. There's not much doing here on Sundays till dinner time."

"Do they have guides?" she said, waving her hand toward the museum.

"No, miss. But you can buy a catalogue."

"And spend all my time trying to figure out the catalogue. Goodness, everything is so big in New York! It appalls me." She took a step forward, then turned.

"I don't suppose—would you mind—if you could get some one to hold the horse—could you take me through? It would save so much time if you could hold the building, and then maybe I could see Grant's tomb too."

The young Irishman swung around on the box. Yes; there, a few rods away, was a policeman. He drove toward the officer, held a whispered conversation and in a few moments returned on foot, leaving the horse in care of a bright looking boy, with the sympathetic policeman in higher authority.

"You'll want to see the Vanderbilt loan collection, a few of the biggest and finest pictures and the Morgan jewels," he said. But they saw much more, and it was fully an hour and a half before they emerged from the museum.

"It isn't hard to see that you have spent your Sunday afternoons to good advantage," said the girl without a touch of patronage, and the young man looked at her gratefully.

"Once I thought I'd like to be a painter, but now—"

He signaled to the lad, who led up the horse.

"Ah," thought the girl as the doors closed in upon her, "probably has a poor mother and some little brothers and sisters to support."

At Grant's tomb he found another obliging youth to hold the horse, and he pointed out to her all the interesting features of the battle scarred relics in the crypt. He drove her out past Claremont and the viaduct, then lifted the window above her head and asked:

"Where next, miss?"

"Home, and I suppose you had better hurry. It is past lunchtime now. Fifth avenue."

The tiny window fell with a sharp click. The young man sat on the box so surprised that the girl in the hansom wondered why he had not obeyed her order to hurry. Then with a clatter they dashed down the drive.

"Three hours—that's three-fifty." She handed him a five dollar bill. "And please keep the rest for yourself. I've had such a beautiful time, and you showed me so much more than our own coachman could have done."

The young Irishman bent low to hand her some change.

"I beg pardon, miss, but I belong to an association, and members are not allowed to take more than a quarter for a tip. Now, if you happened to have a silver quarter, particularly a nice shiny quarter, I'd—"

Grace fingered the change in her long blue purse and triumphantly drew out a brand new quarter which glistened in the clear winter sunshine.

"I don't suppose I could have your hansom tomorrow if I—"

"I'm sorry, miss, but I don't know where I will be sent tomorrow. You see, we're posted at different points different days."

"Well, he is the most human thing I've met in this frosty old town," said the pretty westerner to herself as she touched the electric button.

The Ernest cotillon was at its height. Mrs. Cramer, quite recovered from her illness, watched in radiant triumph the success her husband's niece was scoring.

"Brimming over with personality, don't you know," murmured an old beau, nodding over Mrs. Cramer's shoulder at the lovely girl in her dancing frock of silver gauze. "Actually enjoying herself, isn't she?"

Just then to a rattling two-step half a dozen young men pranced into the room, clad in coaching coats and hats made of paper and carrying long whips, which they snapped as they circled round the great room.

"The horse show figure—how clever!" murmured Mrs. Cramer. "And I hear the favors are exquisite silver brooches and buckles pinned on blue ribbons."

Just then one of the dancers paused before her niece and raised his high paper hat. He was a smooth faced chap, with blue eyes that twinkled merrily into the astonished face of the girl.

"Why, I thought you were!"—

"I was for one day," he said as he led the dazed girl into the mazes of the dance. "An election bet I had to settle, and you came along just in the nick of time."

"And you said that you wanted to be a painter?"

"So I did," he maintained stoutly. "You'll at least admit I know something about art."

She nodded her head, but flung him a reproachful glance.

"Well, my father decided that I ought to help him build railroads instead; that's all."

"If you can drive spikes as straight as you drive a hansom?"

"It was rather a jolly morning, eh?" he said, with a chuckle. "My, but the boys were sore! They hoped I'd get some old girl on shopping bent, who would keep me outside the shops, where I'd meet everybody I knew, but you rescued me in that park drive."

He was handing her the shiny silver favor, and then he thrust his fingers into his vest pocket and drew out a quarter.

"That's a little the best favor that ever came my way. I am going to keep it!"

"Will you have another fare?"

He turned grave.

"As long as I live."

"I am going home tomorrow," she remarked irrelevantly.

"How odd! And I am going to Denver on business. Great luck, and I guess we've proved that we don't require a chaperon."

Bermuda the Onionsless.

If you just go to Bermuda for the onions, you had better stay at home, because all the onions are exported. But if you can make up your mind to do without onions you will have a splendid time. In the first place, there are no railroads and—oh, blessed thought!—no trolleys on the islands. You can forget the hurry and the fret and rest tired nerves. You can bathe; you can sail on the wonderfully clear, still water within the rampart of coral; you can fish and look through water glasses thirty feet down on the teeming life under sea. The Bermuda boats are rigged with something which is almost a balloon jib and a leg-o-mutton, or jib headed maulsail, and they are of deep draft. But they work pretty handily and will stand up and sail fast in rough water, so that you can take them out beyond the protected water without fear.—Travel Magazine.

How a Stone Varies.

A stone is usually considered to be fourteen pounds, but a butcher's stone of dead meat is only eight pounds, a stone of cheese is sixteen pounds, a stone of glass five pounds, while a stone of hemp runs to thirty-two pounds.—London Standard.

Persuasion.

Persuasion is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.—Plutarch.

"Yes, and she takes a great deal of change out of it too."—Houston Post.

Our Debt to Ancient Greece.

Greece and Rome were at the opposite poles of the human world, and equally opposite are their influences upon modern times. Rome was practical, hard headed, juristic, while Greece was intellectual, emotional, artistic, abounding in what may be called the forebrain versus the brain behind the ears. Rome's empire was lengthy, material, matter of fact, while Greece banked on the intellectual and spiritual, finding her greatest conquests in the realm of mind rather than in that of matter. Rome produced no great original thinker, her greatest men shining, like the moon, by borrowed light—light reflected from the sages of Athens. Rome taught men law, order, obedience, but the mother of ideas and sentiments was Greece. From the Eternal City we have inherited our jurisprudence, but it is from the City of the Violet Crown that we have derived our art, science and philosophy. In a word, to quote the substance of Dr. Johnson's saying, eliminate from our modern civilization all that it owes to Greece and the residue would be barbarism.—New York American.

Poetry With a Sting in It.

On one occasion when William Hamilton Hayne was visiting Samuel McIntire Peck at the latter's home in Tuscaloosa the two poets strolled into the woods and paused to rest beneath the shadows of the pines.

"Here are your favorite pines, Hayne," said Peck. "Let's dream a few poems beneath them."

The languid summer day had its effect on them, and they were soon snoring and dreaming away.

But suddenly both awoke and both started down the home road at top speed, shouting as they ran.

An army of yellow jackets had discovered them, and, not being partial to poetry, had forcibly and feelingly resented its intrusion on their domain.

Later, at supper, Peck asked: "Did you make a poem, Hayne?"

"No," was the meek reply. "I made a poultice!"

"So did I," said Peck.

Not a Slip of the Tongue.

It is dangerous to pretend to knowledge one does not possess. A man of little education was once a guest at a dinner, during which a servant stumbled so that a roast tongue fell from the platter he was carrying. It was an embarrassing moment, but the quick-witted host saved the day by remarking, "Never mind, gentlemen, it's only a 'tapsus lingua'." This caused much laughter and applause, and instead of being spoiled the dinner was a great success. The boor, wishing to shine as a wit himself, shortly afterward gave a dinner, to which none of those present at the first dinner were invited. When the guests had been seated a servant entered bearing a beef roast. Just before reaching the table he stumbled and fell. The host, leaping to his feet, astonished the guests by exclaiming, "Never mind, gentlemen, it's only a 'tapsus lingua'."—Kansas City Times.

Got the Autograph.

At Carlsbad on one occasion Brahms' physician, Dr. Grunberger, asked the composer for his autograph for a young lady admirer, but Brahms scolded him for making a nuisance of himself and refused to give it. Some weeks later, at his departure from Carlsbad, Brahms handed to the doctor an envelope inscribed, "With the cordial thanks of Johannes Brahms." Noticing a broad grin on the doctor's face, he asked: "What makes you look so cheerful? You don't know yet what the envelope contains." "Nor do I care," retorted the doctor. "The envelope is the main thing. Much obliged for the autograph!"

The Phantom Fire Ship.

The traditional "fire ship" of the Chaleur bay, New Brunswick, appearing usually before a storm, has a basis of fact, according to a scientist. It is a hemispherical light, with the flat side toward the water, glowing sometimes without much change of form, but at other times rising into slender, moving columns, in which an excited imagination might recognize the flaming rigging of a ship. The general explanation offered is that this object is a manifestation of St. Elmo's fire, an electrical phenomenon, but the reason for its appearing only on or near the Chaleur bay is not known.

Children in Pliny's Day.

It was not a modern American writer who, discussing the children, wrote of them thus: "How many are there who will give place to a man out of respect to his age and dignity? They are shrewd men already and know everything. They are in awe of nobody, but take themselves for their own example." These were the words of Pliny the younger used in one of his famous letters during the first Christian century, but they will strongly apply to much of the young America of today.

How a Stone Varies.

A stone is usually considered to be fourteen pounds, but a butcher's stone of dead meat is only eight pounds, a stone of cheese is sixteen pounds, a stone of glass five pounds, while a stone of hemp runs to thirty-two pounds.—London Standard.

Persuasion.

Persuasion is more prevailing than violence, and many things which cannot be overcome when they are together yield themselves up when taken little by little.—Plutarch.

A Correction

The Boston papers which reported the eviction of Axel P. Larsen in their columns last week were in error in assigning as a cause the nonpayment of rent. The rent was paid in full. The family was compelled to leave the house because of a lease.

Bush Reunion

The reunion of the Bush family which was held Tuesday, June 25th at the Larches in New Braintree is of interest to many residents here as several members of the Bush family are identified with Newton. The Association numbers 64 members and 51 were present. There were three long tables under the trees and the affair was one of the pleasantest ever held by the Association. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bush, their daughter Mrs. Harry E. Tucker, Mr. Tucker and Marion Tucker and another daughter Miss Bertha Bush, Mr. and Mrs. William Frost and Miss Lizzie Frost of Westboro, former residents on Arlington street, Newton, were also present. Mr. Frost is a nephew of Mr. Bush. Mrs. Luther Crawford, mother of Mr. Fred L. Crawford of Elmwood street and sister of Mr. Bush has died since the last reunion which occurred in 1893.

KNOWN FAR AND WIDE.

Hopedale Citizens Co-operate with Each Other in Upbuilding of Progressive Town.

Secret of Growing Popularity of Lieut.-Gov. Draper, Found in His Direct Way of Approaching Public Questions.

The Milford Journal is publishing a series of articles upon Hopedale and its characteristics. In view of its prominence as the home of men whose public spirit and enterprise has exerted a wide influence in the affairs of our state, it is of unusual public interest. The introduction says:

"The Journal proposes to publish a series of articles upon Hopedale and its achievements as one of the younger towns of our state. This will be of unusual interest to our readers as Hopedale for many years was a part of our town. Our people have always taken great pride in the advancement of the town as well as her citizens."

Among the many noted towns that have made the Bay State famous no town holds a more conspicuous position than Hopedale. It is known far and wide by reason of the product of its chief industry. The peculiar feature of Hopedale is the fact that it is a manufacturing town and yet it is admitted to be unsurpassed in its environments as an ideal New England town. The one characteristic that has predominated the town's development from its beginning, is the spirit of cooperation. Practical cooperation on the part of every citizen with every other citizen in all things that go to make up a progressive town. The leading spirit that made all this possible was the late George Draper. Years before Hopedale became a town he laid the foundation for a business that is today the largest plant of its kind in the United States in the manufacture of cotton mill machinery.

There are always reasons for the phenomenal success in the development of every community. It requires men with brains and energy and a disposition to apply that energy to obtain practical results and this was characteristic of the senior member of the Draper family. The business of today is carried on by the three sons who inherited the same sturdy business qualities that predominated the mind of the founder of this great industry. George A. Draper, the treasurer of the Draper Company, is strictly a man of business, devoting his time to the welfare of the company and the town in which he lives, and is less known in a political way than the other members of the family.

The Draper family, however, have not confined all their efforts to business interests exclusively. While the greater part of their time has been demanded in the management of a great and growing business, they have never neglected their duty to their state and country. For more than thirty years George Draper was regarded as a man of great influence with the leading statesmen of the country, even though he was not an aspirant for public office.

Gen. William F. Draper, the older son and brother, and until recently president of the Draper Co., has rendered important service to his country both in war and peace. He served as lieutenant, captain, major and colonel of the 36th Massachusetts Infantry during the Civil War and was breveted a brigadier general at the age of 23. He also served as a Member of Congress for two terms, declining a third nomination. During the McKinley administration he served with distinction at the important post of Ambassador to Italy and has always taken an active interest in all public questions.

Hon. Eben S. Draper, the selling agent of the company, and Lieutenant Governor of the State, is not only identified with the industrial life of his home town but occupies a conspicuous place in the public eye as an administrative officer of the Commonwealth. It is admitted that there is no public official in the state that has risen so high in the estimation of those who have come in contact with his official life as the present Lieutenant Governor. The secret of his growing popularity is the direct way he approaches every public question. Theories are of little consequence unless they can stand the test of practicability. His business training has had for its chief object the securing of practical results and this family characteristic is exemplified in the development and growth of the town which they founded and in which they have been important factors.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—One of the best bills ever given at Keith's during a summer season will hold the boards next week. Keller and Paul's spectacular production, "In Morocco," is very much of a novelty. As its title indicates, Moorish people and customs are what it pictures. A troupe of Moorish dancing girls and acrobats, together with a platoon of Zouaves make up the company. The finish shows some really remarkable military evolutions. Bessie Wyn, who made a great hit in "Babes in Toyland," is to make her first Boston appearance in vaudeville. She is one of the handsomest women on the stage and does a most attractive specialty. One of the big events will be the appearance of Tom Nawn and company after an absence of some four years. "Pat and the Genii" is the sketch to be presented, with Nawn in his famous Irish character. Lawrence Crane, the Irish magician, will show several new illusions, with "Cremation" as his strongest feature. Mlle. Martha is a pretty and shapely girl who does some wonderful work on the trapeze and slack rope. Plantation pastimes in the shape of songs and dances will be shown by the Dixie Serenaders, who are among the best colored performers of the day. Sam Williams, with a pianologue; the Grace Tempest Trio of singers and dancers; Archer and Crocker, comedy acrobats; the Siddon Brothers, comedians; Hamilton and Howlett, versatile musicians; Harry Burgoyne, English coster singer, and the Kinetograph will complete the program.

Majestic Theatre—Boston is to have its annual summer musical production a little later than usual this year. The date is Monday, July 29, (Old Home Week) and the name of the piece is "The Green Bird." The plot of "The Green Bird" is a deep, mysterious secret. It is said to be delightfully funny and entirely original. The music, which is by John Arnold Bennett, is said to be not only musically, but tuneful and catchy. It is being staged by James Francis, one of the leading stage directors of America, and DeWitt Coolman is the musical director. The costumes are to be most elaborate and the scenery will be exceedingly beautiful. The cast is made up of favorites from beginning to end. Fred Lemox will have one of the leading comedy roles. George Schiller is an old-time favorite. Will H. Sloan, John P. Kennedy and John Lorenz. Of the women in the cast Elsa

Ryan is a Boston favorite. Others will be Eleanor Kent, Alice Hosmer and Helen Hayes. There will be a chorus of 70 mostly composed of the prettiest girls ever seen in a musical show.

Norumbega Park—The Norumbega Park form of entertainment is different from that to be found in any other summer park in America. It is essentially refined and its tone is rather quiet. The bill this week is excellent. An eccentric comedy singing, talking and dancing sketch by Mae Melville and Robert Higgins heads the program. It is entitled "Just a Little Fun" and it is really just a whole lot of fun. Jackson and Hoon, although well known vaudeville favorites are ever welcome. The story is not half told in saying that they do a specialty of illustrated songs. One is a singer who is always worth hearing, whether in the latest up to date song or an old time favorite, and the other has introduced many new ideas in the way of moving pictures as illustrations for the vocal feats. The Millard Brothers will be seen in their exceptionally brilliant trick cycling act which has no equal on the vaudeville stage today. One more act which will be announced later and the monograph with motion pictures completes the bill.

We have noticed that the Vacuum Cleaner Company wagons are around and as busy as ever, although they have suffered the loss of several of their wagons by a fire at their garage, it seems that they were equal to the emergency as they now have a complete equipment again.

A Newton Swimmer

Everybody who has been interested in swimming for the past twenty years or more has heard of John A. Leavitt, of Newton, who is one of the fastest swimmers in the world, and whose record in competitive work is an enviable one. He has entered for the long distance swimming championship race for the C. F. King trophy, which is to take place on the 29th instant, starting from Charlestown Bridge about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and ending at Boston Light. Leavitt has never engaged in any contest exceeding two miles, and had about made up his mind to retire from the swimming sport. His friends, however, induced him to enter the long distance championship race, as they are confident that with his remarkable speed and unquestioned endurance the race ought to be a cinch for him.

Leavitt is 43 years old, weighs 138 pounds, about 5 feet six inches in height. He has been identified with professional swimming since 1882. On August first of that year he won the 300 yard race at Hackett's Pond, Andover, and during the three successive years following he won the swimming competitions at the Irish Athletic Club meetings. In 1884 he defeated Captain Henry Simpson, recently deceased, who was famous as a swimmer, in a mile race at the Point of Pines. Same year won a half-mile race at Cottage City. He defeated Hugh Mellen, champion of the Merrimack Valley, in a quarter-mile race at Lynn in 1886, and the following year at King's Island, Lowell, Leavitt won second place in a half-mile handicap race in which James L. McCusker competed. Leavitt was scratch man and was defeated by only a few feet, and McCusker had a very liberal handicap.

From 1887 to 1891 he was the winner in the City of Boston 4th of July races on the Charles. August 31st, 1891, at Crescent Beach, he defeated James L. McCusker in a one-mile race, and a short time after again defeated him at Ocean Pier in a half-mile contest. The same year he won from Captain Henry Simpson in a half mile race, winning a diamond medal emblematic of the swimming championship of New England.

During the winter of 1889 he won a six-day swimming contest from Billy Stone, in the natatorium at the corner of Dover and Washington Streets. A short time ago Leavitt made a remarkable swim at the Brookline baths, establishing a new professional record for two miles, covering the distance in 57 minutes and 26 seconds.

Leavitt has a myriad of friends who are banking upon him as a winner in the Old Home Week swimming race. He is in active training and says he never felt better in his life. He announces that in the race for the C. F. King trophy he hopes to win, but win or lose this will be the last public swimming competition in which he will ever engage. He will keep up his interest in the sport, however, and do all in his power for its promotion.

Too little attention is generally given to the hanging of pictures. They should be hung as nearly vertical flat against the wall as possible, and not topped forward at various angles by using two hooks, so that two vertical lines of wire appear instead of the triangular piece resulting when but one hook is used. The effect is more restful in a room where the pictures are hung vertically.

After the mother of Calvin Houser of Indianapolis has used her rod to good advantage, she threw it down and resumed her cooking. Calvin, smarting both physically and mentally, grabbed the birch and jabbed it in the ground. This was 15 years ago. Shortly afterward the boy left home. He recently found that the twig had taken root and grown to be a tree two feet thick.

A Strike Possible

To strike or not to strike is the question now being agitated by the employees of the Newton Street Railway Company and will be settled at a meeting to be held tonight. The trouble arises over the refusal of the Company to reinstate seven men whom General Manager Brush discharged a few weeks ago.

Twelve men were originally included in the demands of the men for reinstatement but the claims of five have been withdrawn. The men claim that the discharged employees were dismissed because they belonged to the local union. Conferences have been numerous this week between the employees represented by Organizer Walsh of the national union, a committee of Waltham citizens and President Powers of the Company. The most important conference was held at Waltham city hall, Wednesday evening.

President Powers read the charges on file against the discharged men, and upon these he claimed the action of General Manager Brush was based. The charges were not made public, and while a member of the committee stated that they did not appear to be of a serious nature, President Powers is reported to have made the statement that he considered a collision with a team, which was one of the charges, to be among the less serious.

Mr. Powers asserted that he was not prepared to interfere in any way with the action taken by Mr. Brush, and he made the further declaration that the employees' affiliation with the union had nothing to do with their discharge. The seven men, Mr. Powers asserted, were charged with offences of such a character that General Manager Brush was perfectly justified in taking the action he did.

President Powers was asked if he would reinstate the men in the interest of all concerned, but his reply was that he must refuse to interfere with Mr. Brush's action.

Mr. Powers said that no man had been discharged because of his connection with the union. He considered that a man had as much right to join a union as he did a church or a political party.

The resolution subsequently adopted by the citizens' committee was as follows:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Citizens' committee, notwithstanding the refusal of the Street Railway company to reinstate all or any of the discharged men, which refusal is to be deplored, that it would be unwise to precipitate a strike."

"It is our opinion that some of the men, whose cases we have considered, should be reinstated, but as citizens, interested in the welfare of employees and the public generally, we earnestly recommend that the question of a strike be held in abeyance until future efforts be made to adjust the differences."

The Waltham Free Press Tribune has the following editorial on the situation:

It certainly is to be hoped that the employees of the street railway centering in Waltham and vicinity will very carefully consider any action they may take looking toward a strike. There are many things to be thought of. Did any of them dream he had a grievance until the "organizer" came? Has anyone a grievance? Are they not getting a good treatment as to hours, wages, etc., as the average street railway employees in the State? If certain men have been discharged, as is alleged, for good reasons, as is said to appear by the cards of ratings, do their fellow employees think the public will back them up in a strike looking to the reinstatement of those men? Is not discipline imperatively demanded by the public as well as by the company? Would not the employees do exactly the same if they were in charge of running the roads? These are some of the things to be considered before determining on a strike.

Newton Hospital

The regular quarterly meeting of the Board of Trustees was held at the Hospital on Thursday, June 27, 1907.

There were present Messrs. Bray, Bothfield, Day, Early, Farley, Hunt, Hutchinson, Kelsey, Porter, Tyler and Carter and Mrs. Ames, Mrs. Bacon and Miss Lovett.

In the absence of the clerk Mr. Farley was chosen Clerk pro tem.

The usual quarterly report of the Treasurer was submitted.

The chairman of the Finance Committee reported that a will had recently been filed for probate in which the Hospital had been mentioned and from which it would be benefitted upon the settlement of the estate, probably to the extent of $30,000.

Reports were also presented from the Executive Committee and the committee on the Training School. The latter committee reported that the District Nurse, Miss Enholm, had resigned, in order to return to Sweden. Her position will shortly be filled by the Executive Committee.

The following resolutions relative to the late George S. Bullens were then read and unanimously adopted.

"RESOLVED: That in the death of our late associate, George S. Bullens, the Hospital meets with a great loss. Connected as he was with the Hospital as Trustee from its very beginning and as Treasurer from January 16, 1882, to January 15, 1905, it is most fitting that we should remember all his manifold services to the institution and to record, as we now do, our sense of obligation to him for his very faithful work in the management of the finances for these twenty-three years."

The work connected with the office of Treasurer of our Hospital, small at first, steadily increased as time went on so that during the last years of Mr. Bullens' trusteeship it meant a very large service to us, but was always characterized by clearness and accuracy.

We record also our pleasure in his society and in the deliberations that he held with us relative to the needs and welfare of the Hospital. We shall sadly miss his presence among us.

We extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy in the loss that they, with us, have sustained in his death."

A communication was read from Mr. Mellen Bray stating that he had purchased the "Sanborn" property adjoining the land of the Hospital on the north and fronting on Washington St. and that he had caused plans and specifications for a new hospital building to be prepared, and also stating his purpose to cause the building when completed ready for furnishing, with the land upon which it is to stand, to be conveyed to the Hospital.

It was VOTED—that the Trustees of the Newton Hospital signify their readiness to accept from Mr. Mellen Bray, the proposed generous gift of the new building and land, with a full appreciation of their usefulness to the Hospital and that the chair appoint a committee to cooperate with Mr. Bray in the consummation of his plans."

Artificial flowers—There are 430 manufacturers of artificial flowers, leaves, plants and fruits in the district of Dresden. The largest manufacturers employ from 250 to 1000 persons, and the total number of persons engaged in the trade is estimated at 10,000, the larger proportion being women and girls.

All of the furniture and fixtures in the office of Francis E. Leupp, commissioner of Indian affairs, were made by Indians. His desk, tables, portieres and bed-race came from various tribes of red men, and Mr. Leupp knows the makers of many of the articles. His home in Washington abounds in fine specimens of Indian handicraft.

Wood for lead pencils is cut in Texas and mostly imported to Germany, being first cut into strips. There it is made into millions of pencils, and much of it is shipped back to this country. It is said that the Chinese can tell the time of day by the peculiar appearance of a cat's eyes. The pupils of a cat's eyes become gradually narrower toward noon, at which time they are scarcely perceptible lines, drawn perpendicularly across the eye. After that time the dilation commences again, and at dusk the pupil is full.

A Steady Trade.

There were only three houses in the little hamlet on Cape Cod, but an orator from a nearby summer colony was minded to rouse the civic conscience by declaring that trade was the beginning of wisdom. "And," said he, "I assure you that it is not capital half so much as it is initiative that is needed in a place like this."

The three citizens spat collectively and simultaneously, looking straight ahead.

"That kind o' reminds me," drawled one without shifting his gaze, "o' Harve Upham an' Dan Winsor, down the beach a ways. Harve had a shanty an' Dan had a shanty, an' they both had some plug tobacco. One day Harve went to Dan's an' bought 10 cents' worth o' tobacco, an' the next day Dan went to Harve an' bought 10 cents' worth o' tobacco o' him. They continued these sales sev'ral days. They both got all the tobacco they wanted, an' Harve finally retired on the dime." —Youth's Companion.

The Great White Shark.

The man eating fish par excellence is the great white shark. It is otherwise known by the name of man eater. Occasionally specimens are seen on both coasts of the United States, though its more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unsafe to do this, however, when the head has been freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything is placed between them. The skull of a big shark, by the way, is always salable owing to the demand by museums and curiosity hunters. A young sea lion weighing a hundred pounds has been found in the stomach of a white shark.

Protoplasm.

All life on the earth appears only in connection with one substance—a watery jelly—closely related chemically to egg albumen—and this substance is known as protoplasm. Every living thing is built of this one substance—jellyfish, trees, whales, men—everything that lives. Biologists have succeeded in doing some wonderful things. Five or six starfish eggs have been fused into one, from which a monster starfish has been produced. Other starfish eggs have been separated into eight pieces, from which eight dwarf starfish have been brought forth. Crabs can be made to order, with the large claw on either the right or the left side, and flatfish have been produced with the color pattern on the underside. —New York American.

Modest Contributors.

A man was coming up from Chunchen province with a sum of money which had been subscribed for the payment of the public debt. He was met by robbers, who took the money and started away. He called after them that the money was a subscription to the fund for the raising of the debt, whereupon they came back and handed him the money and begged his pardon for their mistake, and they gave him 10 yen extra as a contribution on their own part. He asked their names to publish in the papers, but they said they did not want to obtain notoriety in that way and declined, but said they were glad to pay something toward helping the country. —Korean News.

Why Shells Fly Straight.

Many people wonder why the cone shaped projectiles in their flight through the air do not wobble, but drive straight ahead. This is easily explained. Round the bottom of the shell is a narrow band of copper which varies in width according to the size of the projectile. Being made of soft metal, this band is cut by the steel rifling of the gun on the shock of explosion. This action causes the shell to revolve with lightning rapidity, with the result that it keeps steady during its flight through the air. —London Mail.

Looks Easy, but Try It.

Did you ever notice a jeweler wearing his magnifying glass in one eye? It looks easy, but try it. The inexperienced citizen who tries to look at something with such a glass is sure to close one eye. He can't look at the magnified object with the other eye opened, as can the jeweler. This is only another evidence that one must learn all the details of one's trade. What is easy for the experienced jeweler is all but impossible for the novice. —New York Globe.

Making a Distinction.

"Of course you know something about that candidate's political opinions?" said the trusty adviser. "I don't care a rap about his opinions," answered Senator Sorghum. "How are his epigrams?" —Washington Star.

Unhealthy.

Man (to a friend)—I am done with doctors henceforth. One of them advised me to sleep with my windows open. I did so, and the very next morning my gold watch was gone from the bureau. —Fleegende Blätter.

A Painful Face.

"My face pains me, doctor. What shall I do?" asked the patient. "I'm sure I don't know," replied the doctor. "You know I have no way of improving your looks."

Striking Likeness.

"I want you to photograph me in a striking attitude." "Do you mean holding out your hand asking for money?" —New York Press.

Largest Registration Yet

The secretary of Burdett College informs us that up to this date the school has the largest registration for the next year that it has ever had in its history. The opening day of the fall term is Tuesday, Sept. 3. The degree of success which attends Burdett College shows plainly that people appreciate the modern business methods which this school applies throughout all of its departments.

Serious Results

often attend the neglecting of those places about the house whose unsanitary condition means sickness and disease. Without exception the best article on the market to maintain absolutely sanitary, healthy conditions is Cabot's Sulpho-Naphthol, the ideal disinfectant, deodorizer and purifier for the hot summer months.

Ideal Place for a Vacation

Vermont is all hills and valleys and all through these valleys and on the hill-sides are hundreds of delightful country homes where visitors from the cities may find that "complete change of scene" which is a part of the "ideal vacation". The most charming scenery, the purest air, the most wholesome food, opportunities for absolute freedom and complete rest go with a vacation in Vermont. Description of first-class hotels and homes where visitors are taken is given in "Summer Homes", an illustrated one hundred page book, issued by the Central Vermont Railway and sent for six cent stamp. T. H. Hanley, N. E. P. A. 360 Washington Street, Boston.

Wire Thieves

About 2700 feet of copper wire owned by the Newton & Watertown gas light company was cut from poles on Winchester street, Newton Highlands, last Sunday night.

Besides causing considerable annoyance to the company the cutting down of the wire put numerous electric lights out of commission. The wire weighed about 800 pounds and it is believed it was carried off in a wagon. The wire is said to be worth about 26 cents a pound. It is said that this is the second time within a few weeks that copper wire has been cut from poles of the company.

Skunks

When residents of Hunnewell hill had put the family cats out and locked the back doors about 10 last Sunday evening, preparatory to retiring for the night, two odoriferous skunks sallied forth and took temporary possession of the vicinity.

"Come pretty kitty" softly called a resident returning late from an evening service, as he pursued his way up Hunnewell avenue. It was because the late traveller followed this salutation with a gentle caress that residents of the hill had a bad half hour.

Arrayed in old clothes several of the more courageous residents tried to shoo off the two little black and white animals from a safe distance. The skunks finally took refuge in a manhole. Patrolman Desmond finally restored peace in the vicinity by firing two well directed shots into the animals. The board of health took charge of the remains and gave the sleek little "litters" proper burial.

As the hour of midnight struck, Sunday night, a resident of Hunnewell hill, it is said, could have been seen burying a slightly worn suit of Sunday clothes in his garden plot.

Massachusetts at the Jamestown Exposition

(By Frank Eberle.)

Jamestown Exposition, Va.—An imposing replica of the old State House built in 1713 at Boston, represents the commonwealth of Massachusetts at the Jamestown Exposition. That famous old structure whose reproduction graces the row of state buildings at the Exposition, presents a pretty picture on the water front, overlooking the placid waters of Hampton Roads. The selection of this historic old state house for the Massachusetts Building gives to the outside world an opportunity of seeing one of the public buildings which played a most important part in throwing off the yoke of allegiance of the American colonies to the British crown. Within the walls of the old Boston State House were heard some of the first demands for American liberty and here were taken some of the first steps that led to the declaration of independence.

The Massachusetts exhibits at the Exposition are historical and educational. No agricultural or mineral exhibits have been brought by the "Old Bay State." Its building and the exhibits contained therein and the educational exhibit in the Palace of Education, give to Massachusetts such a distinguished representation at the Exposition that no additional features were deemed necessary.

The Massachusetts building contains some old colonial furniture of historic note, old paintings of distinguished men and women, pictures of school houses of various designs, training schools and other educational features. Among the old paintings are portraits of George Washington, John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Governor John Endicott, Governor John Winthrop and others who figured in the early history of Massachusetts and her sister colonies.

An interesting feature of the Massachusetts building are the exhibits of the handicraft of the blind, as taught in the schools for the blind in Massachusetts cities. The curtains, rugs and portieres of the building were woven by the hands of those who could not see and the excellence of the work suggests a new field of operation for the blind, for the weavers of these articles have demonstrated that the best of work along these lines can be performed by the blind.

The Highway Commission has a fine exhibit, showing the progress and improvements made in road building and means of travel, offering many valuable suggestions in the way of road construction. The second floor of the Massachusetts building contains the old Colonial Chamber and the Representatives Hall of the colony of Massachusetts before the establishment of the American Union. The Council Chamber was the seat of the vice-regal government during the part of the provincial period. The Council consisted of 28 citizens vested with peculiar powers, representing both the colony and the Crown. The Representatives Hall was the scene of many stirring events in the turbulent times when the British Crown began encroaching upon the rights of the colonies. The walls of both of these chambers are hung with portraits of prominent people of that period.

The historical collection brought from the state of Massachusetts is of inestimable value, many of the articles having been loaned to the state commission for this exhibit. The educational exhibit of the City of Boston is placed in the Palace of Education and shows the work of the public schools of that city. It is a splendid exhibit of the great progress and superior system of modern education in New England's best schools. It is of special interest to those engaged in educational work and is carefully studied by visiting teachers from all parts of the United States.

The Massachusetts commission consists of H. L. Higginson, of Boston, president; Francis H. Appleton, of Peabody, executive commissioner; Arthur H. Lord, of Plymouth, finance and legal commissioner; Mrs. Edith Greenough Wendell, of Boston, recording secretary; Wilson H. Fairbanks, of Warren, commissioner; William A. Murphy of Boston, secretary.

Massachusetts Day at the Jamestown Exposition will be Sept. 5, but Massachusetts is daily represented by many of its people at the Exposition. Among the great events booked for the Exposition is the meeting of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, one of the most famous organizations of the nation, whose history dates back to the old colonial days. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery will meet at the Exposition Oct. 7 to 12, and that will be a gala week for Jamestown.

That Tired Feeling

will not be improved any by spending hours over a hot stove baking bread. Why not try

Hathaway's Celebrated Cream Bread

and if you find it fully equal to your own in flavor and spending qualities do away with all this unnecessary hard work?

Think it over. It is well worth your while.

CAMBRIDGE AND WALTHAM

Clubs and Lodges

With a charter list of 30 persons representing nearly every section of this city, Newton Aerie of Eagles was instituted in Nonantum hall Sunday afternoon in the presence of a gathering of about 400 members of the fraternal order.

The degree work was performed by Waltham degree staff and State Pres. Martin F. Carney. The work occupied several hours and frequently evoked warm applause. During the exercises the officers were installed into office.

In recognition of his work in starting the organization Ex-Alderman William P. Sweeney was elected to the honorary office of past president. The other officers were chosen as follows: Alderman William J. Doherty, worthy pres, James E. Morgan, worthy vice pres, William H. Thomas fin sec, John J. Cronin treas, Thomas M. Spelman chaplain, Thomas Molloy inside guard, Joseph Slamin outside guard, Michael J. Keany, J. Sumner Norris and Benjamin F. Thomas trustees.

Addresses were made by State Pres. Carney and the principal officers of the Newton aerie. Following the secret work the aerie kept open house during the early evening, entertaining visiting members from Waltham, Natick, Somerville, Cambridge, Framingham, Boston, Hudson and Worcester. Refreshments were served and there were numerous impromptu songs and stories which delighted the gathering.

The new aerie is the first branch of the well known order in this city. Permanent quarters will be secured at once in Newton proper, and from present indications the membership will be increased considerably during the next few months. As quickly as the details of meetings are settled and quarters fitted up the officers will begin arrangements for numerous social affairs.

The Republicans of this senatorial district have a hard task this fall to redeem the senatorship now held by a Democrat, Hon. James H. Vahey of Watertown. While Senator Vahey has been faithful, conscientious and diligent about his legislative duties, to such an extent that he was the virtual leader of the minority in the Senate, his attitude on many public questions has not harmonized with the wishes of the city of Newton, nor indeed, we believe, with the ideas of the greater part of the district.

It will be a hard task, however, to nominate a candidate to defeat Senator Vahey, who will probably stand for re-election. The nominee should be a man who can obtain the normal republican majority in Newton, sufficient in itself to carry the election under usual conditions. We do not believe that an up-district nominee can obtain that majority this fall against such a popular candidate as Senator Vahey has proved himself to be. While we do not like to advocate the nomination of a Newton man for this high office, it is very evident that if the Republican party desires success, it must pick its candidate from this city, with the understanding that the up-district should receive the nomination as soon as feasible.

Very few of our citizens know that a Newton resident is an active candidate for the nomination for governor of Massachusetts. General Bartlett is such a new comer in this city that such ignorance might be pardoned. The General represents that faction of the Democratic party, which even Republican Newton respects and admires. The nomination might go to a far less worthy man than our fellow citizen.

The ravages of the gypsy moth in Newton are wide spread and dangerous the present year. More money was authorized last Monday evening to be used for the suppression of this pest.
Suppression is used advisedly, for the best informed moth workers, now admit that extermination is impossible under present conditions.

Congressman John W. Weeks has been mentioned as a possible delegate at large to the Republican national convention next year. The Captain would not be the light weight of the "big four"
either mentally, physically or politically, whoever else might be chosen.

ing of the board of aldermen last Monday evening.

A surprisingly large number of aldermen were present for a mid summer meeting, when President Carter called to order at 7:45 o'clock, the absentees being Aldermen Bowen, Burr, Day, Holmes, Jones, Palmer and Webster.

Various unimportant papers and communications were filed and hearings ordered for Sept. 9 on petitions of the Telephone Company for location of poles on Glenwood avenue and for relocations on Berkeley street. Petitions of W. H. Seeley Co. for license as second hand dealers, and of Giacoma De-Luco for permit to erect a blacksmith shop on Hawthorne street were referred to the Public Franchise Committee, after Public Buildings Commissioner Elder had stated that the ordinances required a brick or stone structure while Mr. DeLuco wanted to use galvanized iron.

Minor's licenses were granted Lewellyn R. Chase and M. Joseph Hargodon.
Without debate orders were adopted making street watering assessments to an amount of $13,327.22, transferring $3,000 from Mayor's appropriation to Street Dept. for Ashes, $1,000 from Street Light fund to Moth Work, and

$1,000 from Charity Dept. Sick Poor to Poor out of Almshouse.

And after fifteen minutes of session
the board at 8 P. M. adjourned.

Mr. Newhall Dead

Mr. Joseph H. Newhall, a resident of West Newton for about a quarter century died at his home on Waltham street last Wednesday aged 77 years, 6 months.
Mr. Newhall was born in Salem, Mass., the son of Gilbert G. and Eliza E.
(Gray) Newhall. For some years he resided in Philadelphia where he was involved in the wholesale grocery business and the South American trade.

After the war he was interested in the Oriental Powder Mills, serving for many years as treasurer. For the past few years Mr. Newhall has been in failing health and death was not unexpected.

He is survived by four sons and one daughter, City Treasurer Francis Newhall, Mr. Joseph Newhall and Miss Harriet Newhall of West Newton, Mr. Albert Newhall of Ellwood, Neb., and Mr.
Henry Newhall of Lincoln, Neb.
Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 P. M. at his late residence 372 Waltham street.

Drowned

Becoming exhausted while swimming beyond his depth in the Charles river at Newton Upper Falls last night, Carl Rombwicz, aged about 25 years, a Pole, was drowned. Companions saw him go under twice and thought he was fooling, as they believed him to be a good swimmer. As he went under the third time they dove to his assistance but failed to reach him.

Rombwicz was employed in the Saco & Pettie machine shops at Newton Upper Falls, and lived in a boarding house at 38 Mechanic street. To obtain relief from the sweltering atmosphere he and several companions shortly after 8 went bathing in a swimming hole near the city pumping station on Needham street.
He was drowned in about 20 feet of water, where the bottom is covered with weeds and is full of holes. Victor Burnham and Paul Bueretta dove for the body unsuccessfully. For several hours the police dragged the river but at a late hour had not recovered the body.
It was the first fatal accident this season on the Charles river in this city.

Gloucester Round-Trips Popular

There is no doubt of the popularity of the Gloucester daily and Sunday round trips by the staunch steel steamship Cape Ann, which leaves her berth at the foot of the State street elevated stairs promptly at 10:15 every Sunday, and at 10 sharp on weekdays. It is pretty safe to follow the crowd at that time of day, for the people are nearly all headed for the north side of Central wharf, there to take the steamer trip up along the celebrated "North Shore Route" to the quaintly picturesque city from which the largest fishing fleets hail.

Street Railway Notes

The threatened strike of the employees of the Newton Street Railway Company was abandoned last Saturday when the officers of the national union who have been on the ground for the past two weeks, left for home in disgust. It is understood that the secession of a considerable body of men from the local union broke the backbone of the proposed strike.

DELIGHTFUL WATERBURY

Vermont Village Near Mt. Mansfield Popular as Summer Resort

Among the many attractive villages in Vermont where it is a delight to pass a vacation none is more likely to interest the visitor from the city than Waterbury. The town lies in the notch between the Elmore and Mansfield spurs of the Green Mountains, and thus becomes especially fitted to claim the prize for beauty of scenery with the countless hills and vales and mountain peaks nearby. The winding Winooski river flows through the deep valley in which the village lies, and there are miles of riverside drives. Waterbury is the station for tourists for Mt. Mansfield, and the Mt. Mansfield Electric Railroad runs several trains during the day between Waterbury and Stowe, from which place there is a good carriage road to the Summit House. Camel's Hump is nearer, necessitating a drive of only sixteen miles and a short tramp.
Bolton Falls, where the Winooski cuts through the mountains, is four miles away, and on the Duxbury side, to the man who "knows the way", is to be found one of the most romantic spots in Vermont. Then, there is the drive to Lover's Lane, up Mad River and back to Stewart's Hill or Philip's District, fairly intoxicating with beauty. The hotels of Waterbury, and there are several including the New Waterbury Inn, are scattered along the wide, clean streets, shaded with elms and maples, and are homey and comfortable. There are also a dozen or more delightful village homes, where summer visitors are taken—where one is assured every creature comfort at moderate cost. "Summer Homes", issued by the Central Vermont Ry., devotes several pages of text and pictures to Waterbury. This will be sent to any address on application to T. H.
Hanley, N. E. P. A., 360 Washington
St., Boston. Three fast express trains daily connect Waterbury with Boston and other New England centres.

Dennison Park

What is probably the most attractive and charming sight that greets the eye from the passing trains anywhere between Boston and Worcester, is the beautiful park, with its lawns and gardens maintained by the Dennison Mfg.
Co.—South Framingham's principal industry—in front of the factory and adjoining the railroad.

The park, which is probably one of the finest of its kind in the state, is not only a delightful sight to the passers on the cars, but it is a source of pleasure to hundreds of the Company's employees and to many townspeople who visit these gardens where, from early spring until late in the fall, there is a succession of flowers and shrubbery in artistic arrangement.

The park is divided into three lawns, and Henry C. Clifford, the skillful head gardener, estimates that every time he mows these lawns, he travels 18 miles.

The first, or westerly lawn, is surrounded with California privet so neatly and accurately trimmed that Gardener Clifford has been asked if he used a spirit level in cutting it. In the centre of the lawn is the "wheel", a bed of flowers shaped as the name implies and consisting of cannas, salvias, verbenas, ageratums, and collas.

The second lawn, also enclosed by California privet, is similar to the first except that a star shaped bed, containing for the most part Irisine, is a handsome feature.

The easterly lawn is the largest of the three. Here beneath the flag pole the word "Dennison" is made discernable by the formation of eight beds in the shape of the letters, while just beyond the words "South Framingham" are spelled with snow white shells. This lawn is bordered with shrubs of all descriptions and as well as the other two abounds with beds of geraniums, petunias, cannas, and many other flowers.

The pond and its surroundings is a delightful spot. The water's surface is bright with lilies, some foreign, and some the common variety, while gold fish dart among the reeds blending their colors with the gay surroundings. Geraniums of contrasting hues in contrast to the weeping willows beyond the minature lake.

At present the crimson ramblers are in the height of their beauty and are seen in great profusion.

Within these rose gardens and flowering shrubs on the long stretches of lawn are courts for croquet, tennis, etc.

The plant of this company covers nearly 20 acres of space and supplies employment to a large number of men and women, and we learn that with the recent substantial additions they have made to this plant they intend hiring several hundred more men and women during the coming months.

The Dennison Mfg. Co. gives ample evidence that it is not indifferent to its obligations as one of the town's foremost institutions and that it takes commendable pride in beautifying its surroundings, for the gratification alike of its own employees, the townspeople and the thousands of strangers who pass.—

The Purser's Confidence

By HUNTLEY WEYMAN

Copyrighted by E. C. Parcells

It was spoken of as the slickest robbery ever perpetrated on a London jewelry house. Lady Stanton was looking at a diamond tiara and being waited on by one of the partners when a gentleman lounged forward, familiarly addressed her and, picking up the tiara, walked out of the store with it. The act was so audacious that he was given time to mix with the throng in the street and get safely away.

It was a jewelry house that had never been robbed before, and the decision was immediate to spare no expense to run the robber down. The case was given to the police, with a grand reward attached, and Scotland Yard put its best detectives at work. Two or three private agencies took up the trail for the reward there was in it, and when a clew seemed to lead to Paris a French detective prepared to follow it. From some line of reasoning not made public all the officers came to an agreement that the robber was an American and that he would seek to get away on the Blue Star liner Monarch. The press didn't say anything about trails, but four of the detectives followed their noses at least and secured passage on the Monarch. Had one of the male passengers come to them half an hour before sailing and admitted that he was the robber and held out his hands for the bracelets none of the four would have sailed. As it was, no one came forward, and they felt it a duty to make the voyage to New York and keep an eye on every fellow passenger. They knew nothing of each other's presence in an official way. If any one of them was to give his confidence to any one, the purser was the man to whom to go. It was not long before he had a call. It was a Scotland Yard man. He was wearing false side whiskers and passing himself off as a retired English retail grocer who was making the trip to see his sister in New York.

"I think I have a clew already," he said as the purser promised to respect his confidence and assist him in any way he could. "There is a Frenchman aboard calling himself Dubois. He speaks English passably well and claims to be going over in the interests of the wine business, but he isn't fooling Inspector Saunders a little bit. He's my man or I don't know a crook when I see one."

The next burst of confidence came from Dubois. He identified himself as belonging to the Paris bureau and added:

"First! It was easy enough. I picked him out from the 300 passengers almost at a glance. He is an Englishman and claims to be a retired grocer, and I shall give him rope until we reach quarantine on the other side. Should he suspect me and try to jump overboard I hope I may have your assistance."

Mr. Dubois was assured that the purser and all the other officers of the boat stood ready to lend justice all possible assistance, and he then made way for a detective from a private London agency. The man wore a false stomach and a wig and used the Lancashire dialect. He introduced himself as John Stone and asked for the purser's confidence at once.

"I've got him right between my thumb and finger, this way," he said, with a grin. "The trail led me as straight as a turnpike. I can't ask the Monarch to turn back, of course, but I'll have the darbies on the fellow as soon as we sight Sandy Hook. Lord, but it was dead easy! He calls himself a French name and tries to disguise his English, but any child could spot him off. Help me to keep an eye on Dubois and there will be something in it for you."

The purser smiled inwardly and gave his promise. He thought there were others to come, and he was not mistaken. Mr. Hiram Wilkinson next introduced himself as being from a private Liverpool agency. He had a wig and goggles and was trying to talk through his nose and be taken for a New Englander. He felt that he had come to the right party in coming to the purser, and he didn't shut his mouth until his secret was out.

"It's the fellow as calls himself Stone," he whispered. "I spotted him the instant he came up the gangplank, but I didn't tackle him on sight. I am making the voyage to play my fish. I'll bet pounds to shillings I make him trap himself in less than three days. He claims to have a brother in the butcher business at Albany, but of course that's all in your eye."

"You think he's the man?" queried the purser in an absent way as he began to see the humorous side of the situation.

"Buy, now, take a good long look at him yourself. He looks the thief from head to heel. Haven't you noticed his nervousness? He's afraid he's been followed. He'll make a fight of it when we sight the American coast, but I'll have the irons on him before he can say Jack Robinson. Mum is the word, and you will get your whack of the reward."

There was no fifth detective aboard to ask the purser for his confidence and assistance, but after a day or two Mr. Abijah Absalom Barnes, as he gave his name, asked the official to take charge of a package for him.

"It's only some gimcracks I've been buying abroad," he explained, "but Martha and the children will be looking for presents when I get home. That Yurup is a great country, but I hain't seen no spot like old New Hampshire since I went away. Ever get up that far?"

"I never have," replied the purser as he wondered how Uncle Abijah had escaped the pitfalls that must have been set for his feet.

"If you ever have a chance, come up and stay with me for a week, and I shan't cost you a red cent. If you've got a wife and children, bring 'em along. If you could come in the winter, I'd take you to half a dozen spelling schools, and we'd slide down hills on hand sleds. I own a hill over a mile long, and my old woman can make buckwheat cakes to beat the band. Say, now, is there any danger of any one stealing my package from you?"

"Not the slightest."

"Because there are some suspicious characters aboard. I've run across four different men that I wouldn't trust to go to my barn and get a peck measure of oats. They call themselves Stone, Dubois, Saunders and Wilkinson. We've got tin peddlers up in my state that look more honest than these men do. I'm right on to 'em, however, and they can't fool me."

At least once a day during the rest of the voyage each of the four detectives sought out the purser and reported progress and planned what should be done when quarantine was reached. While each one had only suspected one another on the start, only three days had passed when each man's suspicions included the three others in the quartet. Uncle Abijah bothered them from the start. He insisted on butting in at all times and under all circumstances. If one detective had another aside to pump him, the old man from New Hampshire presently appeared and carelessly said:

"Gentlemen, I hope I don't intrude, but were either of you ever in Socie county, N. H.?"

"Never," was the reply.

"Then you've missed a great thing. We hain't got no Niagara falls up there, but sliding down hill in the winter beats anything you can find outdoors. You load up a big sled with gals and boys and head her down hill and let her go, and the first thing you know you are two miles away. I hain't got but one spare bed in the house, but Martha and me will sleep on the floor if you'll come up."

Sometimes the four sleuths would play cards together and pretend to be very jovial and friendly. Before the game was fairly under way Uncle Abijah would stroll into the smoking room and say:

"I dunno whether any of you fellows heard about that big robbery in London or not, but it was a corker. Feller walked into a jewelry store and picked up a bushel of diamonds and walked out ag'in as cool as a hired man going to work. I happened to be right nigh the store at the time, and I didn't know but what they would arrest me. The feller got away, but I'm purty sure I saw him and would know him ag'in."

He would then lounge out on deck, and the game would soon break up, and one of the officers would hunt up Uncle Abijah to get further particulars. He would intimate that he had seen the robber among the passengers aboard and that he might give him away on landing, and thus the four officers would be further puzzled and mystified. Each one was invited up to New Hampshire over and over again, and before Sandy Hook was sighted each one knew the old man's history from the day he was born. No arrests were made at quarantine. It had been left to the purser, and he had telephoned up. Four interviews had been held with him, and as a result four different men were arrested when the steamer made her dock. The victims were Messrs. Saunders, Dubois, Wilkinson and Stone. Uncle Abijah saw them taken into custody and smiled and winked. He had also worked out a little plan.

Three hours later the four men, accompanied by two detectives from headquarters, boarded the Monarch to ask of the purser:

"What do you know of the old fellow who called himself Barnes?"

"Nice old man and innocent as a child," replied the official. "Say, now, he's gone off and forgotten his package."

"If he returns for it, tie a string around his wrist and hold him fast," laughed one of the headquarters men. "He's the chap that took the diamonds."

The Value of Lifeboats.

Considerably more shipwrecked sailors are saved by their own boats than by any other means, says London Answers. Thus of 2,159 persons saved on the coasts of the United Kingdom in 1903-04, 105 were saved by the rocket apparatus and assistance from the shore, 423 by lifeboats, 143 by coast guard boats and other craft, 641 by passing ships and 735 by their own boats.

The total number of seamen and passengers saved from wrecks of British vessels everywhere and of foreign vessels on or near the coasts of British territory during the year 1903-04 was 6,080, of whom 2,159 were saved on the coasts of the United Kingdom, 1,782 on the coasts of British possessions abroad, 1,343 on the coasts of foreign countries—all from British wrecks, be it remembered—and 802 on the high seas. Of the 3,927 persons saved from British wrecks abroad 2,562 were saved by their own boats and 959 by passing ships, while only 28 were saved by lifeboats and 149 by rocket apparatus.

An Impression.

"Did that lawyer get a clear view of the case?" inquired the litigant's friend. "No, I'm afraid he didn't. I told him that my trouble was about money, and he seemed to be proceeding on the theory that by relieving me of my money he would cause the trouble to disappear."

The Reason Was Plain.

"There was a woman," said a lawyer, "whose husband was killed in a railroad accident. The railroad, to avoid suit, gave her $5,000 damages. The sum satisfied the woman, but a month or two afterward, taking up a newspaper, she read about a man who had lost his leg in the same accident, and, behold, this man was given by the company damages to the amount of $7,500. It made the woman mad. She hastened at once to the office of the railway's claim adjuster. She said bitterly:

"How is this? Here you give a man $7,500 for the loss of his leg, while you only gave me $5,000 for the loss of my husband."

"The claim adjuster smiled amiably and said in a soothing voice:

"Madam, the reason is quite plain. The $7,500 won't provide the poor man with a new leg, whereas with your $5,000 you can easily get a new husband and perhaps a better one."—Kansas City Star.

London Theaters Charm.

One of the delicious treats London offers Americans is the acting and accessories of her theaters. The orchestra stalls or balcony stalls are very sumptuous and very roomy and are evidently created on purpose to appeal to hearty diners. The usher is a very tidy young woman in black dress and coquettish cap and apron, possessed of a sweet face and a still sweeter voice. You pay her a shilling for each programme. The stage settings are perfect in detail. Best of all is the elocution of the players. From the rising of the curtain even unto the going down of the same, each and every word uttered is as clear and tuneful as the tinkle of a silver bell. You don't have to wait till the middle of the first act before you can even guess what the plot is about. Under these unusual circumstances the interest one takes in a play is greatly enhanced, and he wonders why an American company is not as well drilled.—Travel Magazine.

A Curious Widow's Cap.

A very curious cap forms the "widow's weeds" of the Australian aborigine in one part of the great island continent. Near the northeast bend of the Murray river it is the custom for widows to attend upon the tombs of their departed lords. Then, after shaving their heads, they cover them with pipe clay, kneaded into a paste. The head is first covered with a net to prevent the clay from sticking too tightly to the skin—a misfortune which is partly averted by the amount of grease with which every Australian native is anointed. A layer of this clay several inches in thickness is plastered over the head and when dry forms a sort of skull-cap exactly fitting the head on which it was molded. As it weighs several pounds, the widow's cap cannot be comfortable.

Why Age Improves Wines.

"Why do wines improve with age?" "Because they marry," answered the expert.

"Marry?" "Yes. That is the term used in the trade. This sherry, we say, 'has married well' or 'that hock has married nastily.' We mean by a wine's marriage that its different components—the alcohol, the sugar, the carbonic acid and so on—have blended together smoothly. In a new wine this blending, this marriage, has not yet taken place, and hence the harshness of new wines. Old wines are valued because the alcohol and sugar and acids and others have all married together into one fragrant compound."—Exchange.

Weather Vanes.

The best weather vanes are made with the greatest nicety and precision so that they balance perfectly and turn with the least possible wear. The vane is, of course, longer on one side of the socket than on the other, or it would not turn with the wind, but it is a narrow vane, for instance, the weight of the solid head is easily made equal to that of the longer, projecting, but thinner feather end, and all vanes, whatever they may be, are balanced as to weight and so adjusted that they turn easily and with the least possible friction.

Crazy People.

"Crazy people never act together," declares the superintendent of a large asylum for the insane. "If one inmate attacks an attendant, as sometimes happens, the others would look upon it as no affair of theirs and simply watch it. The moment we discover two or more inmates working together we would know they were on the road to recovery."

How He Caught Them.

Archbishop Whately had a true sense of grammar, says an old Englishman who remembers him, and delighted to spring catch questions. One was: "What is the vocative of cat?" Generally the assured answer was "O cat!" The archbishop would smile then and say, "No; puss, puss!"

The Four of Them.

Smith—Good morning, Jones. I hear you have a son and heir. Jones—Yes; our household now represents the United Kingdom. I am English, my wife's Irish, the nurse is Scotch, and the baby walks.—Liverpool Post.

His View of It.

Bond—Don't you realize that marriage broadens a man? Benedict—Oh, yes. I suppose it can be put that way, but "broadens" is the word I've always used.—London Tit-Bits.

I pray, first, for good health; then for prosperity; thirdly, for happiness, and, lastly, to owe no man anything.—Philemon

The Earliest Anchors.

The earliest anchors of which we have any record were of wood, and gradually, through the iron anchor of one hook and the anchor in the shape of a rake, there was evolved the anchor with the straight thick shank, the two curving arms with flattened extremities and the long cross stock. The process of storing one of these old anchors was a long and laborious one. It was hove close up to the capstan or windlass; a man was let down by rope to hook on a huge tackle, by which the anchor was then hoisted, still perpendicular, to a stout projecting timber. Then the lower end had to be hoisted up horizontally by another tackle and the whole made fast. In the modern stockless anchor a chain is attached to it at the balancing point, and this is passed through a pulley at the head of the anchor davit. When the anchor is high enough, davit and all swing round until the anchor is over the hullboard, where it rests and is secured by chains.—London Globe.

Working in Steel Masks.

The workman wore a steel mask with glazed eyeholes, a rubber suit, rubber gloves and rubber boots, and he carried a pair of tongs of silvery aluminum.

"In certain departments of the plant," said the dynamite manufacturer, "all our workmen are dressed like that. They must be. Otherwise they would be smeared with chemicals and splashed with acids that would eat their flesh like liquid fire."

"But the aluminum tongs?"

"They are for lifting the gun cotton out of its nitric acid bath. Aluminum is the only metal upon which the nitric acid has no effect."

He turned to the workman,

"Everything all right, George?" he said.

"So, so," came a sepulchral answer from behind the mask of steel.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Slang of Other Days.

Slang has always been a fruitful source for the expansion of language, and instances may be multiplied of words now respectable which were once tabooed as vulgarisms. But, on the other hand, there have been many slang phrases in use for centuries which have never become acceptable to the purists. As long ago as 1750 the celebrated letter writer Horace Walpole used to speak of "sitting guzzling" and getting "drunk as an owl." Then again in the diary of one of the most prominent women writers of the eighteenth century, Frances Burney, are found good slang phrases of the American college girl of today, as, for instance, "I sneaked out." "Did you ever know such a toad?" and "I had a vile cold."—St. Louis Republic.

Hyperbole.

A Rochester clergyman was accustomed to use scientific terms, which the people did not understand. A deputation waited on him with the request that in the future whenever he used such terms he would explain them. On the following Sunday he used the term hyperbole and added: "As agreed on, I beg to explain this word. Were I to say that at this moment the whole of my congregation are sound asleep it would be hyperbole, but if I say that one-half are asleep that is no hyperbole, but the truth." The next day the deputation again called to say that the minister need not explain technical terms. The people would learn their meaning from a dictionary.—Rochester Herald.

At His Word.

Many postoffice names are queer enough to make one desire an explanation of them. Sometimes the explanation is queerer than the name itself. A minister in Cuss county wrote to Washington in behalf of the residents of a growing hamlet, asking that a postoffice be added to its institutions. The request was favorably received, and he was asked to suggest a name that would be acceptable to his neighbors. He replied that they were not hard to please so long as the name was peculiar. The postoffice department took him at his word, and "Peculiar" is the name of the office to this day.—Kansas City Star.

The Case of Emergency.

While on the march in India the pioneer corporal of a famous Irish regiment went to the quartermaster for a loan of a camel to carry a spare tent, but the quartermaster refused, saying: "I have only the cart, and this spare camel I am keeping for a case of emergency."

The corporal said, "Can't you put the case of emergency on the cart, sir, and let me have the camel?"—Red Letter.

Wasteful Ignorance.

The ordinary waste of food in an English middle class family would be sufficient wholly to maintain a French family of similar station, and the waste of food is at least largely due to the ignorance of cookery which prevails among the classes from which English domestic servants are derived.—London Lancet.

Would Like It Very Much.

"By the way," asked the waiter, "how would you like to have your steak?"

"Very much, indeed," replied the mild man, who had been patiently waiting for twenty minutes.

Exasperating.

Mrs. Subub—Oh, George, the cook left this morning, and the Outertowns are coming to dinner! Mr. Subub—Damn it! They always catch us between cooks!—Brooklyn Life.

It is not possible for men to be perfectly blessed and happy, except a few.—Plato.

HOPEDALE'S PROGRESS

Home and Factory Conditions a Factor in Life of the Town

The Draper Company has Always Shown the Deepest Interest in the Town's Development

Milford Journal Series.

The impressions that a visitor gets of Hopedale and its people are not those of the ordinary factory-town population. They are a prosperous, home loving people who have a common interest in the development and progress of the town. They have had better opportunities than most people, and have used them to good advantage. One looks in vain for the signs of want and misery usually found in large manufacturing communities.

The location of Hopedale is ideal, a moderately elevated slope which has numerous swells and hollows constitutes the residential section of the town. Nature provided much of the picturesque quality which lends charm to the place, and adjacent territory is agreeably diversified by dwarf woodland, cultivated fields, level uplands, and elegant estates.

As the general welfare of a town is due in a large measure to its industrial interests, so it is with Hopedale with its single industry known the world over as the Draper Company. The company has always shown the deepest interest in the town's development. What strikes the eye with special force is the uniform excellence of the houses and the high tone of their surroundings. These houses are owned by the Draper Company and occupied by its employees, yet their architecture and dimensions place them well within the conventional class of residences for business men or persons of professional pursuits. The company erects anywhere from five to fifty of this style of houses every year, and rents them to its employees for from $2.50 to $3.62 per week, inclusive of water and maintenance. Some of the houses built a few years ago are a little less imposing and rent for as low as $1.75 per week. Moreover, the company gives cash prizes aggregating $375 per year for the best kept lawns and gardens, which prove a most excellent incentive to conscientious caretaking, and the results clearly justify the efforts.

Every home presents an attractive appearance. The houses owned by the company and private houses alike reveal a quickened spirit of domestic pride seldom observed to that degree in any wage earning community. All the new houses are two and one-half stories have broad verandas, lawns and yards. The double houses, which are in the majority, are divided vertically, giving each family the use of the several floors. No less than fifteen styles of architecture are exemplified in the company houses, each showing due regard for taste and comfort. Young trees and flower beds are planted at measured distances on the low graded lawns; wide streets, always neat and clean and lighted by electricity, winding in among the houses in serpentine fashion. All these modern conditions combine to raise the town above the gloom and monotony which usually greet the eye in manufacturing towns. With such environments the little town has made a national reputation for its exemplary shop and house conditions.

It is doubtful if there is a business concern in our country where the relations of the employers and the employees are so harmonious as here. There never is occasion for prolonged misunderstandings, as the men are perfectly free to call upon the management, whenever they have questions of mutual concern to bring up, knowing full well that their claims will receive due consideration. But wages and factory conditions predominating as may be, their influence are only contributing factors in a life of this exceptional manufacturing community. The same considerations that are displayed in the construction of the factory buildings to obtain wholesome conditions for the employees are shown in the provisions for their care outside the factory. They have been provided for at the least possible cost to themselves. It goes without saying that this attention is appreciated by those who are fortunate enough to enjoy these unusual conditions.

THEATRES

Tremont Theatre—"The Hurdy Gurdy Girl" is now in the seventh week of its successful run at the Tremont Theatre, Boston. It has appealed to the public as a typical summer show, having, beside the novelty of a plot, the essentials of fast fun, lively music and an array of pretty girls. The costumes, also, is a factor that must be noticed by women, especially as all of the second and third act gowns were made by the leading dressmakers of Paris such as Worth, Felix, Lafriere and Paquin. The following notable names are in the cast: Jacques Kruger, May Boley, Walter Lawrence, Mrs. Annie Yeamans, Mme. Mathilde Cotterell, Harry Stone, Henry Norman, Mae Botti, Adele Rowland, Sylvain Langlois, Arthur Conrad and Tony Sullivan. There are numerous song hits, the chief of which is "The Apple of My Eye" sung in the last act. The background for this scene is one of the handsomest presented in years, being in onyx and marble. This color scheme is carried out in each costume, chorus and principals all being in black and white.

Majestic Theatre—"The Green Bird" will be produced at the Majestic Theatre Boston, on July 29—"Old Home Week", but inasmuch as the stage of that playhouse is pretty much occupied by artisans who are building the scenery for the show, it has been found necessary to provide space for the principals in other parts of the theatre. Thus Fred Lennox and Alice Hosmer may perchance be found in the Manager's office busily at work on one of their funniest scenes. In the theatre lobby Helen Hayes, John P. Kennedy, John Lorenz and others may be trying out a dance. In the box office Alice Kent is trying over the business with one of her songs, while down in the smoking room Elsa Ryan and Charles H. Bowers are rehearsing one of their jolly duettes. Will H. Sloan usually selects the stage for his rehearsals and plugs away on his lines regardless of the hammering of the carpenters or the bustle of the painters. Thus the whole company distributes itself during the morning and afternoon. At night both principals and chorus are assembled on the stage of the Majestic and Stage Director Francis puts them through the piece from opening chorus to finale. Musical Director De Witt Coolman thumps away on a piano and everybody works like sin, no matter how hot it is.

Norumbega Park—The success of Norumbega Park is the success of clean amusements. No other park in the country is more attractive for ladies and children who may visit it day or evening, without an escort and in perfect safety. Everything possible is done for their convenience and comfort. The list of attractions is well calculated to please those in search of rest as well as recreation. The Zoological Garden is alone worth the price of admission to the park and yet this is merely an incident in the program provided for the pleasure of patrons. The Chalet of Wonders, the Electric Fountain, the Canoeing and Boating, the Launch service, the Swing Court, the Merry-Go-Round—all these contribute to the pleasure of Norumbega's patrons. But the greatest feature of all is the show in the covered open-air theatre. As a delightful variation from the usual vaudeville bill, this week the attraction in the theatre will be the picturesque musical comedy "The Girl from Vassar," written by Matthew Ott, who has been so successful in contriving this special form of al fresco entertainment for summer parks. It is a cleverly conceived operatic musical comedy, bright, snappy and thoroughly wholesome.

Keith's Theatre—There will be two items on the bill at Keith's next week of more than ordinary importance, "The Pianophiends" and "A Night With the Poets." "The Pianophiends" is the name given by Jesse Lasky, originator of "The Military Overture," "The Colonial Setpiece," "The Stunning Grenadiers" and several others of the biggest features ever seen in vaudeville, to his latest conception. It enlists the services of eight people, four of them remarkably pretty girls, and five pianos. It created a veritable sensation in New York and should make quite a stir in Boston, for it is certainly a very novel idea, capital worked out. Another out of the ordinary presentation is "A Night With the Poets." It is a most artistic affair, a decided advance along the lines of illustrated songs and living pictures, and must be seen to be thoroughly appreciated. Matt Keefe and Tony Pearl, "The Yodler and the Harpist," do a musical act that is extremely attractive, Keefe having a fine voice that he well knows how to use, while Tony Pearl is a master of the harp. A Boston girl who has won distinction in musical comedy, May Mooney, will show her fine contralto voice in several selections. Cornalla and Eddy, who do a clever acrobatic and juggling comedy turn; Phil and Nettie Peters, in a nonsensical offering that will win many laughs; Martini and Maximilian, burlesque magicians; Allen, Delmain and Allen, travestists; Davis and Walker, "real coon" singers and dancers; "Wise Mike," Foster's educated dog; the Valdungs, ring performers; the Kaufman Brothers, burnt-cork entertainers, and the Kinetograph will complete the bill. The Fadedettes will be the leading feature of the Old Home Week bill, commencing Monday, July 29th.

An Enjoyable Sail

With so many excursion steamers leaving Boston daily, it is sometimes difficult to choose which trip to take. For a short sail, however, one will make no mistake, the trip to Nahant or Bass Point is chosen. The opening of the Bass Point and Nahant season has attracted thousands of people for the sail on the "General Lincoln" and the "Governor Andrew."

Since the Bass Point line purchased these steamers from the Nantasket line, they have been altered and refitted and generally improved. With the improved boat service, the sail to Bass Point has become extremely popular. Bass Point itself has many attractions, not least among them the fish dinners that the hotels and restaurants are serving there.

The new location of the Bass Point line in Boston is at Otis Wharf, 408 Atlantic avenue, a few doors from the Rowe's Wharf elevated station.

Keith's Theatre has issued a neat little brochure containing some excellent half tones in two colors of interesting places in Boston under the title "Historic Boston." The reading matter tells what to see of Historic Interest in Boston and suburbs and the best manner of reaching the places described.

Here is a remedy that has never failed: Have a teakettle full of boiling water on the stove; take the garment dry, cut a lemon in two, squeeze the juice on the spots and hold over the steaming spout of the teakettle; then see how readily the spots of rust yield to this treatment.

The posthumous book of Mrs. Craigie, better known as John Oliver Hobbes, bears as preface a letter from Hon. Joseph H. Choate to the publishers. Nothing could be more fitting than this friendly appreciation, serving at once as an introduction to her last work and as a farewell to the author.

Senora Clara Santos, the wife of a wealthy Cuban planter, joined the insurgent party and led a body of men against a detachment of President Palma's troops. Dressed in the uniform of a non-commissioned officer, she charged, sword in hand, at the head of her troops and put the enemy to headlong flight.

Something quite new in wedding bouquets is a "granny" muff to be carried by the bride upon her left arm. The foundation is white tulle. The flowers nestle in the tulle amid falling showers of looped gauze ribbon. Orchids, lilies of the valley, sweet peas, roses and orange blossoms are woven thickly into the muff and mingle their perfumes.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO

Sometimes when sickness is in the family and a physician has been called in and a prescription written, you have noticed the name of some particular druggist printed on the paper on which the doctor writes the prescription.

This does not mean that you are compelled to take your prescription to the druggist whose name appears on the paper.

It is recognized the world over that a patient has the privilege of taking the prescription to any drug store that he prefers.

The prescription department in our store is always watched over by a registered pharmacist; a doctor's prescriptions are always filled exactly according to the way he intended they should be filled.

TELEPHONE TID-BITS

Odd Clippings About a Public Service

About Which We Think We Know a Great Deal, And Yet Which Is Full of Novelty

The first commercial telephone ever established connected the Boston office of the Walworth Mfg. Co., then located in the rear of the Delta Building, in Postoffice square, with the factory in East Cambridge. A magneto telegraph wire had been used for sending messages between these points. Prof. Bell transformed it into a telephone line by placing telephones at either end of the wire.

For many years the Holmes Bungalow Alarm has furnished protection to the banks. Years ago, when it was discovered that speech could be transmitted over a wire, the manager suggested that the officials in one bank could talk with officials in another bank, if they desired to do so, because he could connect them by arranging the plugs connecting the alarm wires. Curiously enough, not one bank availed itself of this privilege. The offer was courteously refused, with the explanation that all desired communication could be had by correspondence or by a personal call. What would happen if the banks tried to do business in that way, today?

Women are becoming more and more attracted to employment as telephone operators, because of the possibilities such employment holds forth for the ambitious. Girls must be 17 years old to be eligible for employment, and they must spend a month in the training school before they are given positions at the switchboard. For this month's training they are paid, however. The lighting and ventilation of telephone operating buildings are probably the best in any class of commercial structures. The Company supplies during the winter months coffee and cocoa free of charge, and allows the operators at all times daily recreation periods in addition to their luncheon hour. The capable are rapidly promoted, and it is not unusual to find a girl acting as supervisor or chief operator after a year or two of service. In some of the larger exchanges the chief operators get as high as $1000 a year. A girl who demonstrates special ability is apt to be recommended as a "telephone clerk"—that is, as a private branch exchange operator. Nearly all the larger business houses have their own switchboards and employ their own operators. The woman who occupies a position of this nature is usually charged with a great deal of responsibility. She must have tact, discrimination and judgment, and she is frequently one of the best paid clerks in the office.

A Philadelphia paper says that the three quickest methods of communication are Telephone, Telegraph and Tell-a-woman.

Operators are so busily employed making requested connections that they cannot, without impairing the service, discuss details with subscribers; in fact, are forbidden so to do. For the benefit of the latter, however, other sources of information have been provided and are indicated in the following suggestions:

Call "Information," at the exchange with which you are connected, if you want the telephone number of a new subscriber, or of a subscriber located at a particular address, or the number of a pay station through which most conveniently you can send a message. The "Information Operator" has all such matters classified and indexed, and in contrast with the regular exchange operator, can give such information in detail, without interrupting the regular business of the exchange.

Call the chief operator of your exchange if you are experiencing difficulty in getting a desired connection, whether this difficulty be from repeated "busy" reports, or from any operating cause. The chief operator, being in direct charge of the operating force, can render assistance in satisfactorily adjusting temporary difficulties.

Call the manager of your exchange if the service you are receiving is not perfectly satisfactory. Defects and troubles are liable to manifest themselves in a public service so complicated and far-reaching as the telephone. The Company will consider it a favor if subscribers will promptly direct the Manager's attention to these defects and troubles, so that a remedy may be applied promptly. The cooperation, in this way, of the subscriber will be of great assistance in developing a quality of service otherwise unattainable.

Until a call has been "completed"—that is, until A has been placed in direct communication with B, and conversation has been opened—all the preliminaries count for nothing. The operator may take A's call and transmit it to B's house or office, but if B does not promptly respond, the operator may report "Don't Answer," or the effort may become ineffective because A abandoned the call and walked away, probably inwardly or openly denouncing the telephone system.

After leisurely deciding to answer, B may take up the telephone and cry

"Hello," only to find that he can get no recognition, A having departed. He therefore charges the annoyance to the blunder of a telephone operator who rang his bell when he was not wanted.

Neither A nor B can be so desirous as the Company that such incidents as have been described shall be avoided. While A was calling, several miles of wire were placed at his exclusive service as was the time of one or more operators. To have all this equipment and executive skill negatively employed meant a loss to the Company, because it represented capital and labor that might have been productively engaged.

There would have been some satisfaction in the performance, even though it were slow, had A waited until B answered; but to have the effort of a costly equipment wasted, and then to be charged with the responsibility for the failure of the call would seem to justify a grievance on the part of the Company rather than on the part of the subscriber.

By frequent service tests the Company is endeavoring to develop promptness and accuracy on the part of its operators, and to eliminate, so far as possible, such annoyances as "Don't Answer" reports. It is fair to assume, after a lapse of a reasonable amount of time, a minute or a minute and a half—that the person called for is not within hearing of the bell, if there be no response. The operator hardly can be expected to be informed of the many reasons that may have delayed a response. One of the trifling, yet very important ways in which subscribers may assist in developing better service, is in promptly answering their bell calls. A prompt answer is not only a favor to the Company and a courtesy to one's neighbor, but a distinct advantage to one's own interests.—From "Telephone talk."

On the basis of the prevailing price of copper, it has been estimated that if it were necessary to entirely rebuild the lines of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, they would cost twice as much as it did to install them.

An architect has made a calculation which shows that no large building has elevators sufficient to accommodate the rush if the telephone were summarily destroyed and messengers used to transact the present volume of business.

Missionaries

After 33 years' service as missionaries in India Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Peterson are guests at Newton Centre for a few weeks of Rev. Marcus C. Mason, 32 Pelham street, being obliged to temporarily retire from active work abroad because of the ill health of Rev. Mr. Peterson.

They arrived at Newton Centre last Friday evening, enthusiastic over the success of the missionary work among the Garomen. Here they will be guests of Rev. Mr. Mason, a former associate in foreign missionary work, for little more than a fortnight. Then they will go to New York, where they will remain for about two years, according to their present plans.

"It will be 33 years next autumn since we first went to India as missionaries from the Baptist missionary union of Boston," said Mrs. Peterson. "This is our fourth visit during that time to the United States. The last one was six years ago, and we were greatly surprised to see the many changes which have taken place."

Mrs. Peterson spoke particularly of the work of beautifying done in the outlying sections of Boston and particularly in the vicinity of Newton Centre since her last visit here.

"The district in which Rev. Mr. Peterson, myself and four others from Boston Baptist missionary union labor comprises about 100 square miles, with headquarters at Tura Assam. In this territory there are now about 150,000 persons. Thirty-two years ago there were about 250 Christians in the district. The labors of the missionaries have now increased the number to slightly more than 4000, a notable showing. The first two years we were located at Goalpara, in the northern portion of the district. Then we went into the Garo hills, where we have since labored. Practically all the converts were Garomen, who for many years have been spirit or demon worshippers. The missionaries have established 105 village schools in the district in the past 30 years, and now have a central training school with 250 students. These students learn to instruct others and eventually take charge of the village schools, so that now the work of the missionaries themselves is mostly devoted to directing others. Many of the boys have learned to support themselves.

They are first taught their own languages, after which they are taught English. Before the coming of the missionaries the Garomen had no literature. The missionary workers adopted the Bengalic characters and reduced the Garo language to writing, afterward changing it into English. Mr. Peterson has already prepared a reader and arithmetic in the language of the Garomen and is now working on a physiology. Of the Scriptures they have the New Testament and Genesis in their native language. The Garomen were formerly free and wandered as they pleased. They took to raiding the plainspeople and this led the British government to take them under its power. The local government is now divided into four sections, with a mozarid in charge of each district. Then there are head men of each village. To carry on the local government the people are assessed a very small tax. The Garomen do not buy the land they occupy. They are instead assigned a portion. This they will clear of timber and then burn it over to enrich the land. For three years they will then cultivate the section, raising mostly rice for home consumption and cotton for export. At the end of three years they abandon the particular section and begin similar operations upon another portion. Part of the land has been taken by the British government, and it has valuable bamboo and other trees. From parts the tea planters are forbidden coming in. The churches now support their own pastors. Expenses of the village teachers are now partly paid by the government and partly by the missionaries."

It was with no little enthusiasm that Mrs. Peterson recalled her own work in this little known part of India. "I have been so long there that it really seems like home," said she. When a reporter suggested that in 32 years she had probably contributed her full share of uplifting the Garomen, Mrs. Peterson hastily declared that she did not consider her share of the work finished and already looked forward to returning to India. Rev. Mr. Mason is planning to return to his former labors in India before many months.

FACTS AND FIGURES NEWTON BANKS

No phase of the development of the Newtons during the past few years presents so many attractive features as does the growth of the banking facilities of this city and the large increase in the volume of business transacted by these institutions. There have been large demands made upon the banks of Newton, especially during the past ten years, but there has been such a rapid increase in the facilities for the handling of business that no difficulty has been encountered. In fact, there is no point in the entire make-up of a live, hustling, progressive city in which Newton is stronger than in her banking institutions, and it may be further stated in this connection that nothing has contributed more forcibly to the upbuilding of this city than her splendid banking facilities.

It is sometimes rather difficult to distinguish between cause and effect, and it may be asked whether these banks have grown and prospered because of the opportunities afforded through rapid development of the Newtons or whether they have been brought about through their progressive methods a part of the prosperity in which they have shared to such a large extent. The latter view is the more acceptable one because the banking institutions of the Newtons have lent all possible aid to every enterprise of a legitimate character, and the liberality thus shown by them has been an important factor in contributing to the expansion of the city in many ways. There has never been a reasonable demand to which they have not responded in the proper spirit. They have helped finance many large undertakings which would have been impossible but for the aid given by them. The men who are at the head of the Newton banks are known for their marked ability. Many of them are connected, as officers and directors, with some of the largest and strongest fiduciary institutions of the city of Boston. They are men of unquestioned business integrity. They have handled the money entrusted to them with as much care as they have handled their own. They have drawn a close distinction between liberality to their patrons and injustice to their depositors. They have fought shy of every speculative scheme and have done their business along strictly legitimate lines. They have treated everybody in a manner that has begotten confidence not only in their ability, but in their absolute integrity. And the gratifying result of such action on their part is to be found in the high standing which they enjoy not only at home but in every part of the United States. There have been no 'wild-cat' schemes fostered by our banks, and so the gratifying result of such action on their part is to be found in the high standing which they enjoy not only at home but in every part of the United States.

At this time we have two national banks, two trust companies and three savings banks. The national banks have a combined capital of $300,000 and surplus and undivided profits of nearly $130,000. The two trust companies, (see special articles) have a total capital of $200,000 and a surplus and undivided profit of $158,000. The assets of the four business banks exceed $3,500,000. Our three savings banks are rated among the staunchest institutions of their kind in New England. In all they have 22896 depositors whose savings represent the sum of $8,239,699.86. All these fiduciary institutions have shown gratifying increases in deposits and in the number of depositors during the past few years. In almost every single case each year has shown a decided gain over the one preceding it. This is particularly true of the past five years during which time the greatest gains in the history of local banking have been made. At this writing the total assets of the seven Newtons banks are about $11,800,000.

JOHN T. BEALE.

Custom Tailor, 347 Watertown Street, Newton.

Mr. Beale is a native of Scotland but long resident in this country and widely known aside from his business as a member of the Odd Fellows and other organizations of fraternal and social character.

He has been established twelve years on this street and for three years in his present location. Here he makes a fine display of goods and patterns in the store, and employs in the shop at the rear, three to five skilled hands steadily. He is an expert cutter and has a very excellent patronage.

He has a special department for the repair, cleaning and pressing of ladies and gentlemen's garments and this branch also is extensively patronized.

For mending hard substances like metal of glass there is nothing more satisfactory than melted alum. Simply melt the alum over an intense heat, and apply while hot. An ivory handle to a knife which had loosened was mended in this way forty years ago, and has been in use ever since without breaking or loosening.

Special Trade Edition NEWTON 1907

With so much emphasis placed on the residential features of our beautiful city, it is no wonder that the business interests of Newton have been overlooked. It is our purpose in the present issue of the GRAPHIC to present to the citizens of Newton the variety and extent of the financial, mercantile and manufacturing places of the community.

Public service corporations which enter Newton are also mentioned upon, altho, strictly speaking, they are not local concerns. Yet, inasmuch as they

Facts relative to the Mercantile Manufacturing and Financial Interests of Newton, with Sketches of the leading Merchants of the City touch the daily life of our people, we deem them worthy of recognition.

Particular attention is invited to the financial institutions which are noted in these columns. Newton has two national banks, two enterprising trust companies and three well managed savings banks. The statements of these banks indicate the financial strength of our local merchants as well as the thrift and energy of the people.

We trust our readers after a perusal of these pages will appreciate, as never before, the business interests of the city, which, combined with beautiful estates, good roads, and handsome residences, make Newton, the Garden City of the Commonwealth.

OUR FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

NEWTONVILLE TRUST CO.

Some Facts Concerning the Work Done by an Important Financial Institution.

The Newtonville Trust Company, in the Masonic building, at Walnut street and Newtonville avenue, Newtonville, is recognized as one of the most notable financial institutions in this part of the state. The company was organized in 1894 under the laws of Massachusetts, being incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000. It began business in 1896 and proved a successful enterprise from the start. Its surplus is $48,000. The officers and directors are all men of high standing and reput and have the full confidence of the community in which they live. The Hon. John W. Weeks is president of the institution and the vice-presidents are: Sydney Harwood, James W. French and G. Fred Simpson. The Board of Directors consists of Samuel Farquhar, Frank J. Hale, John F. Lathrop, William F. Hammett, Andrew S. Woods, Albert P. Carter and Frederick S. Pratt. Samuel W. French is the secretary and treasurer.

The correspondents of the trust company are the First National Bank of Boston and the Merchants' National Bank of Philadelphia, Pa. All of the usual routine of a general banking business is done by the company, including the receiving of accounts of merchants and others, subject to check at sight, while special rates of interest are allowed on money payable at a fixed time. The company's charter gives it authority to receive and hold, collect and disburse money, securities or property in trust or otherwise, from individuals, executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, or by order of the court. The company also acts as trustee for corporations and as financial agent for any persons, societies, corporations or municipal authorities. It is also agent for the payment of bonds, coupons, dividends, etc.

The banking department is situated on the ground floor of the building and is fitted with quartered oak and handsome iron grill work. In the rear, are the directors' room and the safe deposit vault, the latter being one of the best of its kind in this part of the state, being both fire and burglar proof and supplied with every modern device to guard against robbery, including an electric burglar alarm and time and combination locks. It was built by the Diebold Safe and Lock Company, of Canton, Ohio. Boxes in this vault are rented at from $5. to $35 per annum, according to size. The patronage of the company comes from the wealthiest residents of the region.

Mr. Weeks has been president of the company since its organization. He is junior member of the firm of Hornblower & Weeks, bankers and brokers, of Boston. He is also vice-president of the First National Bank of Boston and is now serving his second term in Congress, as the representative of the tenth district. The directors are all prominent residents of the Newtons and Mr. French, the secretary and treasurer, has been connected with banking interests for the last thirty years.

STANCH AND SOUND.

The Newton Centre Savings Bank a Model Institution of its kind.

The Newton Centre Savings Bank was organized by a few public spirited citizens on February 25th, 1896. Its organization was attended by considerable adverse criticism, from those who, not being so far sighted, could not believe that a Savings bank was needed in that territory which includes Newton Centre, Newton Highlands, Chestnut Hill, Newton Upper Falls, Waban, besides parts of Needham and Brookline. The bank was successfully started, however, and that a want of the people was thereby filled, is conclusively proved by its steady and flourishing growth from its initial business day July 11th, 1896.

The extent to which it has developed and to which its usefulness has increased is indicated by the fact that it has at present over 3000 open accounts. It has always paid the prevailing rates of interest. The banking rooms are modestly but thoroughly equipped with all the necessities of modern banking, and as a result the business of all its depositors is promptly and accurately handled to their complete satisfaction.

The bank in its present sound and prosperous state is a monument to the conservative and self-sacrificing management of its President, Treasurer and Investment Committee, all of whom are prominent men in the community, experienced in business as well as finance, and to them the trustees and depositors of the bank look for the development and safe keeping of their deposits.

The Hon. Seward W. Jones of Newton Highlands, at present a member of the Governor's Council is, and has been since its organization, President of the Bank. GAS AND ELECTRICITY

NEWTON & WATERTOWN GAS LIGHT CO.

Interesting History of a Successful Illuminating Concern.

One of the best managed and most successful of the public service corporations in this part of Massachusetts is the Newton & Watertown Gas Light Company, with its headquarters in the city of Newton. The history of the growth and progress of this concern forms no unimportant part of the history of the several communities which it efficiently serves, as those who benefit by its operation freely admit. The company was organized under the same title in the early portion of the last century, in 1854, to be exact. Its first president was Joseph N. Bacon and Geo. W. Bacon was its first treasurer, two men of notable business forethought and sagacity, whose personal characteristics are remembered by a few of the oldest residents even to this day. In 1904, the old company was re-organized, with Charles L. Edgar, as president, and Fred G. Havlin, as treasurer, both being at the helm today. Waldo A. Learned is the general superintendent of the corporation.

The company's plant, which is thoroughly modern and up to date, is situated in the town of Watertown. The company supplies Watertown, all of the Newtons and Wellesley with a high quality of gas, making use of 600,000 feet of street mains to convey its product to its patrons. It also furnishes gas for 999 lamps on the public highways and has no less than 6,453 meters in daily use. Stoves to the number of 3,175 and engines to the number of 19, also get their supply from the gas holders in Watertown. In 1906, the company's report shows, the consumption of gas manufactured by the company reached the enormous total of 161,000,000 cubic feet. Despite the unexcelled quality of the service rendered by the company, its charges to its customers is exceedingly low, being at the rate of only $1.00 per 1,000 cubic feet. When the company began business in the '50s, it charged as high as $4.00 per 1,000 cubic feet to its patrons, but, with its constantly increasing facilities and its resulting economy in the work of manufacture, it is now able to serve the people at the low rate named, and with no diminution in efficiency. The company keeps constantly on hand a large and well selected stock of gas-burning stoves and appliances which are sold at cost, all connections being also made at cost.

and had at the time of its last statement available for this publication, in addition to its capital of $100,000 an earned surplus of $100,000 for testimony of good management.

At the time of this same statement, May 20, 1907, its resources were upwards of $1,350,000 and its deposits more than $1,100,000. It had loans at the same time, of $786,832, a sum significant of its service to the community.

The appointments of this bank as well as its methods, show a progressive and modern spirit. Its banking rooms are furnished in mahogany fixtures with bronze grill work, and are provided with a spacious safe deposit electrically protected vault of the latest pattern, a ladies room, furnished, telephone, etc.

The banking department does both a commercial and trust company business. Interest at 2 per cent per annum is allowed on daily balances of $500 and upward, and higher rates on special deposits. Checks and other items payable anywhere in North America, are collected for depositors without charge.

The correspondents of the company are the First National of Boston, the First National of Albany and the Fourth Storey National, Philadelphia.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER PLANT.

What the Gas Company Does in the Direction of High Grade Electric Lighting.

It was in 1885 that Newton, Boston's most charming suburb, had its first experience with electric lighting, the lights being furnished by the Newton Electric Light & Power Company, organized in that year. That company continued its operations until 1889, when it was absorbed by the Newton & Watertown Gas Light Company which had long done notable service in supplying illuminating gas throughout the same region. At that time, the power plant was situated in Watertown, but, in 1906, it was removed to Newtonville in a modernly constructed, reinforced concrete building in which were installed everything which was latest and best in the direction of electrical machinery. The building occupies a desirable site in Homer street and is one of the landmarks of the city. The equipment of the plant is unexcelled, it having a capacity of 250 arc lamps and 20,000 incandescent lights and motors in service of customers capable of generating 200 horse power for manufacturing purposes. The company uses, at the present time, 26,000 feet of underground cable and has 6,000 poles, the overhead wires extending above 667,540 feet of streets.

The city of Newton is supplied with 193 arc lamps and 1198 incandescent lights for the illumination of its public thoroughfares. The arc lamps are kept burning all night on every night in the year, while the incandescent lamps shed their bright rays each night until 12.30 o'clock, when they are extinguished. The company has a contract with the city to light it for five years. It also furnishes electricity not only for light and power, but also supplies motors, electrical appliances, heaters, etc., including cooking apparatus. The company has agreed with the city of Newton to expend about $20,000 each year for placing its wires underground and is now engaged in putting its conduits in the streets. The prices charged to customers compare favorably with those charged by similar concerns in other places, being among the lowest in the state.

The electrical department is under the management of Welles E. Holmes, recognized as one of the most expert electrical engineers in this region.

A large and steadily extending business is entrusted to its Trust department.

The affairs of this institution are in capable hands. Dwight Chester of Chester & Hart, Boston agents for the Aetna Life Insurance Company, is its president, Edward H. Mason, Attorney of Newton Centre, vice president, Erastus T. Colburn, a resident of Newton Centre, secretary, and Frank L. Richardson, treasurer.

The directors are Messrs. Chester, Mason and Colburn; David H. Andrews of Newton Centre, president of the Boston Bridge Works Co.; Mellen Bray, Newton Highlands; agent and director, Saco & Pettet Machine Shops, Newton Highlands; Seward W. Jones of Newton Highlands and of Jones Bros. Co. of Boston and Barre, Vt.; and Edgar W. Warren, Newton Highlands, Mayor of the City of Newton, all prominent and representative business or professional men of these parts.

This bank is located at 103 Union St. Newton Centre. Its hours are from 8 to 11.30 a. m.; from 1.30 to 2.30 p. m., and from 8 to 12 on Saturdays

BOSTON ELEVATED COMPANY

To a city situated as Newton is the problem of local transportation is a most important one. One of the group of municipalities which, surrounding "the Hub" itself, constitute Greater Boston, Newton is in a position different from what is to be found in any other part of the world. The rapid transit needs of Greater Boston are peculiarly diversified, and the result has been the building up hereabouts in the past ten years of a unique and remarkable transportation system.

Wherein this system differs from others is chiefly that it is scientifically laid out, equipped, operated, and expanded. There is no haphazard guesswork about it. Every move made is in accordance with a well defined design in which is considered three cardinal requirements—good engineering, efficient service, and economical management. And each requirement is considered not alone with reference to present circumstances but with full regard for the future—that important factor which the last generation so often left out of account altogether, but which this generation, profiting by the experience of its predecessors, anticipates so far as human judgment can.

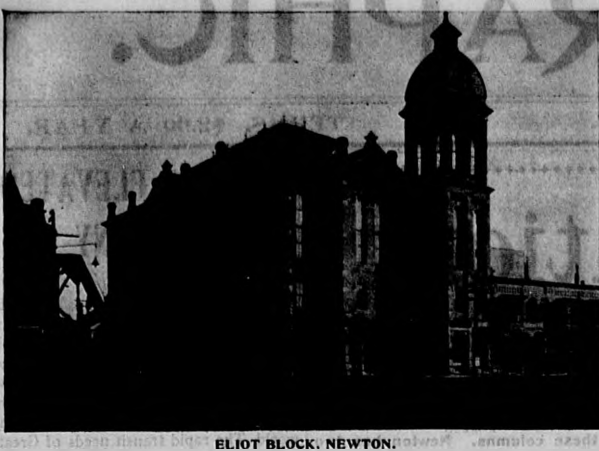

It is just about 20 years since the introduction of the trolley car. That event marked a new era in street railroading and a new era in city living. People are bound to live within riding distance of their work, and riding distance means the number of blocks or miles, as the case may be, an individual can cover in the length of time he is willing to devote to going back and forth, to and from his labors, every day. Horse cars restricted the area over which a street railway system could operate, because the community, on the average, will allow only about so much time for travel morning and night and the distance a horse car could go in that time was limited. By greatly reducing the running time for a given distance the trolley enabled a large number of people to make their homes correspondingly further from the business centre than they used to be, and this started a migration from the centre outwards—from Boston to the suburbs, and from the heart of each suburb to its outlying districts.

When the Boston Elevated Railway Company took charge of nearly all the car lines in Greater Boston, ten years ago, it found a serious situation. Boston, receiving, day in and day out, hundreds of thousands of people from its surrounding cities and towns, was threatened with the worst form of transportation congestion. It was evident that to disperse this, and insure against similar formation in the future, every branch of the transportation system must be laid out scientifically, particularly in regard to extensions, and the plant existing at the time was rearranged and improved with that in mind. The first step toward breaking up the congestion was bisecting the congested district by means of a north-and-south rapid transit line, utilizing the subway already in existence—though it was planned and built originally only to be occupied by surface cars and it has never been possible to make it really adequate—and connecting it with an elevated structure with central distributing points, for the northern and southern suburbs, one in Charlestown and the other in Roxbury. To give further relief the Atlantic Avenue elevated circuit line was constructed, connecting through the subway at either end. In the same way the plans from the beginning provided for tapping the congested district on its eastern side by the East Boston tunnel and on its western side by the rapid transit lines to Cambridge, work on which is now about to begin.

The trunk line to the western suburbs, which specially interests Newton, was the most puzzling feature of the general layout. The territory to which it would be the main artery of travel is the largest of suburban Boston in area, though not in population. It is growing rapidly and in such a way that with lengthening distances and a steadily increasing number of riders the demand is for more and more diffused service. Already a second rapid transit route to the west from the neighborhood of Beacon Hill is being discussed, and eventually there may be two foci for radiating surface lines in this direction.

The Elevated people had some peculiar difficulties to meet in carrying out their scientific scheme. The old street car system, even after it came under unified management, was a patchwork of what had originally been several distinct lines converging upon a common metropolitan centre. Many of the suburbs were connected with each other only through the "city proper", people riding "into town" on one side and out on the other, in order to get from place to place. To break up the additional congestion thus caused, cross connecting lines were opened between numerous suburban points, and wherever feasible

ELIOT BLOCK, NEWTON.

HOWARD B. COFFIN.

Strictly First Class Groceries and Real Estate expert, 69 Elmwood Street, Newton.

This is one of the oldest and largest concerns of the kind in Newton and its proprietor Mr. Coffin is one of the best known residents of the place. He has lived in Newton the better part of his life and been a prominent merchant and leading citizen for years. For some 20 years nearly he was principal assessor of the city and is now treasurer and member of the Executive Committee of the Mass. Asso. of Assessors. He was the first president of the Retail Grocers Association.

This business was established by Andrew Cole as long ago as 1845, that is to say over 60 years ago, and its proprietor takes pride in the fact that it numbers among its patrons families that have traded with it right along during that whole period of time: it has in fact, the trade of the best people hereabouts.

It is now thirty years since Mr. Coffin came into the firm. The house was in the Coles Block for a quarter of a century. It has been in its present location at 69 Elmwood street, since 1901. Here it occupies a fine large commodious store and basement 30 by 70 with storehouse in the rear. These quarters are stocked with a full line of fancy and staple groceries of the best grades imported and domestic. The staff numbers 5, and for delivery purposes 4 teams are run.

A house of the first order in short, in stock and resources, reputation and methods, a credit to its owner and to the city.

A NEWTON INSTITUTION.

Brigg's Cigar Stand and News Agency, 273 Washington Street.

Tastes differ, says the old aphorism; some eschew tobacco in all its forms, others can hardly dispense with it, especially the post prandial cigar; while as for the news, with the many in our time, it is, as old Rabelais has it "meat, drink and clothes to them." In this light, Brigg's establishment, while not the greatest in Newton, is by no means least important.

Everybody knows it, and knows its proprietor. He was born here, and during the four years that he has been serving the public he has made himself indispensable. Every day his patronage grows, and every day he must add to his stock to keep pace with it. And a mighty miscellaneous stock it is to be sure, cigars and tobacco, all the standard brands of them; soda and the milder beverages; stationery and the new fangled postals for which there is such a rage and a fad at present; the leading dailies, the N. Y. Sunday papers, the weeklies and monthlies—what not, indeed! If you can't find what you want here, you are certainly hard to please. An institution we call it; yes, indeed, an institution we could not well do without.

"SOMETHING DOING."

Contracts for Electrical Construction that Have Been Executed by H. E. Johannot.

The following are a few only, of the numerous important works of electrical construction that have been executed by Johannot, leader of that line of business in Newton.

The Park Street Church, Boston. Stanley Motor Carriage Co's office Building, Newton.

St. Patrick's Convent, Watertown, Mass.

The U. S. Fish Commission plant, Edgar Harding and Hon. H. E. Hibbard Woods Hole, Mass.

Residences of O. M. Fisher, W. F. Plant, C. M. Emerson and others at Newton, or in its vicinity.

The Mt. Ida and Horace Mann schools Newton, and the Channing Church Sunday school in the same place.

The Bush Stables, Clark's Stables and numerous other places of business also, all first class jobs.

Mr. Johannot has been established in this line here for 20 years. He carries a large and varied stock of electrical supplies and will undertake contracts of any size for electrical construction and equipment. He maintains a staff of expert hands for that special purpose.

Mr. Crockers is the oldest and largest concern of the kind in Newton. Socially, as well as in a business way he is a man of note and distinction. He belongs to the Armenian, and to the Unitarian Club, and to other of the local organizations.

PAINTING & DECORATING.

The field afforded by Newton and Vicinity in this line.

There are a number of establishments engaged in the painting and decorating line at Newton, and much competition, but as the old saying is "there is always room at the top." And that's where our subjects are, the firm of J. M. Briggs & Son, literally "at the top."

This is an old house as well as a first class one. It was established in 1869 by its senior member, J. M. Briggs. The junior member, F. H. Briggs, his son, came in under the present name and style in 1900. He knows the business thoroughly, having mastered it under his expert father's tutelage and eye.

They have a fine large, light and airy shop for inside work with some 18 or 20 painters, decorators and paper hangers, regularly on their staff. Their trade territory embraces Boston, Newton and surrounding towns, but they are in position to estimate on and execute contracts in any part of the country, New England especially.

Following are some of the many fine jobs they have executed hereabouts: The Newton National and Savings Bank Building, painting and decorating; most of the business blocks on the Square; churches, school houses and a very large number of the finest residences of this vicinity.

Estimates for paperhanging, ceiling work, tinting, glazing, sign painting, graining and hard wood finish may be had of them at any time.

A. H. McCLELLAND.

Leading Tailor of 281 Washington St., Newton.

Near everyone in Newton knows McClelland the tailor. A. H. McClelland of 291 Washington street—one of the largest and finest places in this fashionable burg. For Newton is inhabited by many people of wealth and fashion, and those who feed them and clothe them and supply their wants, must be first class.

The McClelland place certainly ranks among the best, and would be considered such anywhere. Its head is a native of Ireland, tho' long a resident here, and a practical tailor and cutter himself, equally expert on ladies' or men's work. He carries a fine line of goods in both imported and domestic stock, and in his shop employs six of the cleverest hands in this part of the country.

Mr. McClelland has been established here since 1897. He is a Mason and an Odd Fellow and aside from his business a man of many acquaintances and friends.

THE LEADING TAILORS.

The Erikssons of 269 Washington St., Nonantum Square, Newton.

Newton is now provided with a tailoring establishment of the first order in the Eriksson establishment on Nonantum Square, which was moved here from Boston in April 1906. This business was originally established in the Hub in 1899 by the elder Eriksson.

The Erikssons are of Swedish parentage and birth but have been resident here for many years—since 1881 in point of fact. The elder has followed the business for forty years and the younger for twelve. Both are expert cutters. Mr. Oskar Eriksson was, for many years, employed in that capacity with McPhee, the well known tailor of Cambridge.

The Erikssons make a specialty of high grade custom work—suits from $25 up and pants from $7. Their office and show room occupies the ground floor of the place; in it they make a fine display of the latest in fashionable goods and patterns. The shop is in the basement. The place is equipped with electric lights, steam heat, and all the latest improvements. Inside and out ten tailors are employed. Incidentally a department for cleaning, pressing and repair work is maintained for the convenience of patrons.

THE TIME O' DAY.

It's at Crockers you get it in West Newton if you want it right.

West Newton marks time so to speak by Crockers, the principal watch and jewelry store of the place. It is at 1261 Washington street,—has been there in fact since 1901.

Its proprietor, Daniel Crockers, is considered one of the most expert clock and watch repairers in these parts. He is a Cape Cod man,—a native of Barnstable and has been at the trade for nearly 30 years. As in social relations he is well known.

Mr. Crockers is also an expert in the jewelry and optical goods line. He carries a choice selection of timepieces and silverware, wedding and birthday gifts, etc., and for the convenience of the public keeps open on three evenings of the week until eight o'clock, namely, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights.

There are people in West Newton who will have no other than Crockers to overhaul a watch or clock for them, so highly is his skill esteemed.

Mr. Crockers makes a specialty of repairing clocks and cases no matter how intricate, French and chime clocks especially, and he would be pleased to call anywhere on command. Telephone connection.

THE ART OF THE FARRIER.

The Newton Horse Shoeing Shop, 206 Washington Street.

The day of the horse, some of the wisest say, is past. They base their judgement on the popularity of the motor car and auto. But people identified with the horse business—the stablemen and dealers, the shoers and all that, will tell you not so, no more than in the hey day of the bicycle, when the same sort of prophecy was made. No, not so, or at least as the phrase has it, "not yet."

At all events Newton boasts one shop at least, devoted to old fashioned scientific shoeing, the Newton Horse Shoeing Shop of Delaney & Hewitt, at 206 Washington street, the Murray Block, round which, for a generation—20 years at least—all the old time traditions of the trade as to real and genuine workmanship, embracing anatomical knowledge of the horse's foot as well as turning the shoe, has centered. Here is one shop at least where the conditions affecting the horse in his daily work are understood and wherein particular attention is paid to "interfering," "over-reaching," corns and tender-footed horses.

This is the shop that has the high class trade of Newton, its proprietors and principles, T. F. Delaney and R. A. Hewitt are experts in the business. Mr. Delaney is a native of Ireland whence most of the best shoeing smiths come from. He has been following the trade in Newton for 25 years. Mr. Hewitt was born here, but he too has had a lifetime's experience at his line.

THE ELMWOOD STABLES.

One of the Finest Establishments of the Kind in New England.

Geo. W. Bush, Proprietor, Elmwood Street, Ward 7, Newton.

A model establishment, first and foremost of its kind here in Newton, tho' not the growth of a day is our subject, the Elmwood Stables of Geo. W. Bush, an establishment of which any town might well be proud. It had its origin in a modest little venture made by Mr. Bush, as a young man, full of vim and ambition, thirty seven years ago. In 1870 to be exact. How it has grown and developed since is a story interwoven largely with that of the growth and development of the town, and of interest on that account. For while much must be credited to Mr. Bush for his energy and enterprise, much came also from the expansion of the place which was his field.

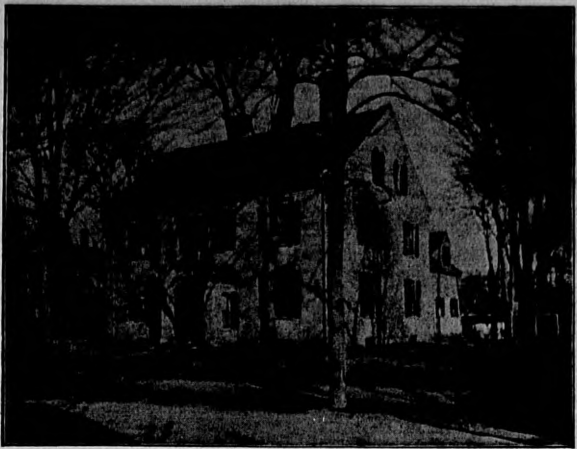

At all events it was in modest fashion, as we have said, that Mr. Bush began. In 1874 he had prospered enough to build him a brick stable 50 by 70, on the same site at present occupied by his business in part. Again in 1898 he built the fine, large modern brick stable of three stories 75 by 100 adjoining. There may be larger concerns of this class in the country but there is no finer appointed.

The first floor of this establishment is floored with cement. It contains the carriage storage, washery, etc.; the second is the horse floor and the third is the feed department. The place throughout is equipped with steam heat, electric lights and all the latest sanitary improvements. It is in short, a model stable.

There are 96 large and comfortable stalls in the two buildings. Mr. Bush does a boarding business, a hack business, a livery business and an undertaking business, and in all four of these lines, leads all his local competitors. He furnishes carriages for parties, balls, weddings and funerals, with liveried drivers if requisite, and has the high class patronage of Newton and vicinity.

His hacks will be found at the station waiting all trains, or may be called up by telephone.

As an undertaker and funeral director also, he has close relations with all the local cemeteries. He is an embalmer, regularly graduated from the Massachusetts College of Embalming in Boston.

It is one of the most attractive places of this line also. It is fitted up with marble counters and makes a fine display of canned and glass and other shelf goods, fruits in season, game, poultry and both western dressed and native beef.

Mr. Forsyth handles Squire's pork products, the Occident, Angelus and other high grade flours, and numerous other popular specialties. He employs about a dozen clerks and other hands, and runs four delivery wagons in Newton and vicinity.

"The" Market and Grocery Store of Newtonville, 285 and 287 Walnut Street.

Perhaps the neatest and most modern market and grocery of Newtonville, as it is one of the newest and latest is the Bates establishment, or rather the two of them at the adjoining numbers 285 and 287 Walnut street in that settlement. The meat department at 285 is fitted up with marble counters, hardwood fittings and the latest in the way of an ice plant for cold storage of goods.

The appointments in the grocery department are similarly up-to-date and modern, and the stock is perhaps, the highest grade in town. It includes all the favorite delicacies, condiments and comestibles, domestic and imported, and among other specialties the "Regent" flour, for which the house is sole agent in these parts.

In the line of meats, game, fine fruits and early vegetables, this house is not to be outdone. A line on its business may be got from the fact that the employees number seventeen and the delivery teams seven.

Mr. Bates, proprietor of this establishment, is a native of Whitman, but has been resident in Newtonville now going on ten years. The grocery business he has been in for a considerable period, this market was opened in October 1906. It has been a pronounced success.

JOHN F. PAYNE.

It was furnished by the house of Symonds & Poor and is certainly to say the least artistic.

The establishment as a whole is exceedingly attractive. The fittings are of hardwood and the floor of mosaic tile, and the stock we may add, comports with the fixtures. It embraces, not only the usual lines of drugs, chemicals and medicines, but confectionery and cigars of high grade, perfumery and toilet articles, stationery, etc.

Special attention is given in this establishment to dealers orders and to the higher class of patronage. No finer stock can be found in Boston or the other large cities than here.

OLD HULL MANSION

THE ROSS STEAM CAR.

One of the Very Highest Grade.

Manufactured by Louis S. Ross, Newtonville.

With Office and Factory at 38 Crafts Street There.

The Ross Steam Car, an automobile of many points of superiority, which is in growing favor with many just now, is manufactured in Newtonville at 36 Crafts street, by Louis S. Ross, one of the principals in the great contracting and building concern the H. F. Ross Company of Newtonville and Boston. Mr. Ross established this business in 1904, equipping a commodious plant for it especially, with steam power and thoroughly modern appointments and machinery, which establishment affords employment to 30 or 40 hands.

Though of recent introduction comparatively speaking, the sale of the Ross Steam Car extends pretty well over the country and thus encouraged Mr. Ross is increasing his capacity and output right along.

For 1907 he has put forth two models to choose from, a touring car of 108 inch wheel base and a runabout with either a 100 or 108 inch wheel base. The general construction of the two as to power plant is the same: the runabout of course, is geared slightly higher and has lighter tires, springs and parts.

These cars are of very substantial construction. At the same time style and design have not been lost sight of. They are high grade throughout, with pressed steel frame and all the machinery forward under the bonnet. Both are essentially all the year round cars. They have ample speed for good roads and an excess of power allowed for bad roads or mountain climbing under any and all conditions.

Their advantages may be summed up in this: simplicity and ease of operation; the car may be kept continuously under steam, without attention for several days.

One of the strongest arguments against the steam car in the past was the necessity of firing it up every time it was desired for use. The Ross Car overcomes this drawback. It can be put away at night and started instantly the following day or even the day after, steam pressure being constantly maintained under its manner of construction, without attention.

This applies to winter use also and absolutely. The car can be left over night in zero weather and the severest snow storms without fear of freezing or other damage, thus realizing the claims of the air-cooled gasoline motor advocates as to the non-freezing car, yet avoiding the air-cooled car trouble of over heating in hot weather for the steam car runs equally well at all times.

The flexibility and ease of control of a steam car are proverbial; the absence of change gears, clutches, and the electrical ignition system, as in the Ross car tends greatly towards simplicity. All speeds from top to full speed are controlled by a small lever on top of the steering wheel. And this, along with powerful foot brakes, explains why a steam car is so easily handled in crowded traffic, mountain conditions or other emergencies.

The Ross car in short, represents the most advanced type of high grade auto construction. It will be found to compare most favorably, both as to merit and cost, with any high priced high powered automobile manufactured, and one who is looking for the best and simplest at a medium price should investigate it.

The Ross Steam Runabout is planned for this special service. It is put on the market to meet the demand for a high class runabout of ample power adapted to the exacting requirements of touring, physicians or business use.

BRAY BLOCK, NEWTON CENTRE

W. F. ELLS.

Selling meats and provisions in a suburban town at Boston prices is something which not many dealers can afford to do, if they care to be successful in business, but that is just what W. F. Ellis declared he would do when he opened the Centre Market at 74 Langley Road, Newton Centre, in 1903. He has kept his word, and although furnishing the choicest of provisions, poultry, game, fancy beef, pork, lamb, fresh fish and canned goods on that motto his business has grown to such proportions that he has to employ five clerks and three wagons to attend to his customers.

Mr. Ellis is a native of Nova Scotia and is not more than middle aged. His trade is mostly local, but is of such proportions locally that the name of the Centre Market is a household word. Everyone speaks of the handsome and commodious store with the neatly arranged stock on the ground floor and the general appearance of cleanliness and care which prevails in the place. Mr. Ellis' telephone number is Newton South 88-2 and many of his customers use that means to make their purchases, knowing that the Centre Market gives prompt attention to wire orders as to personal selection of goods at the store.

It is worthy of note that Mr. Ellis is so connected, outside of this establishment, as to give him a most intimate knowledge of market conditions. This "inside information" enables him to buy his products at most advantageous rates. These savings are shared by his patrons who secure at "Ellis' Centre Market" the best products, fresh from the leading markets, at prices that simply defy legitimate competition.

This concern has trade all over New England. It also enjoys a growing Southern trade. Many high class carriages are built by it, but its specialty is the well known Murray automobile top. Mr. P. A. Murray its inventor, is the head of this establishment. He is a native of the Emerald Isle, but a Newtonian of nearly 40 years standing. He has been in this business the better part of his life, beginning on his own account in 1877, and has made a great success of it. UPPER FALLS.

THE WOODWORTH TREAD.

The Leather Tire Goods Company and its Output.

A Notable Industrial Enterprise of Newton Upper Falls.

The Leather Tire Goods Company of Newton Upper Falls, is one of the most important concerns of that burg. Its plant is located at 1325 Boylston street there, on the Charles river, near Echo Bridge. This plant embraces a group of one, two and three story buildings with aggregate floor space of 65000 square feet. It is equipped with electric power and all the most recent appliances for its branch of business, and furnishes employment to from 50 to 60 hands steadily the year round.

The business of this company is the manufacture of the "Woodworth Tread" an automobile tire protection made of several thicknesses of specially tanned extra-tough chrome leather with a broad outer strip, and re-enforced with several thicknesses of strong canvas, and a leather inner lining, all held firmly together by steel rivets that go through and clinch on the surface of the broad outer strip of chrome leather. These strong steel rivets are headed with flat thick burs of steel; and these burred heads of steel bear the brunt of the wear, prevent "skidding," as it is called, and give the tire a secure hold on the road—and this whether it is wet or dry, level or sloping, smooth or rough, hard or soft, muddy or icy, so that it will not slip, slide or skid.

This tread is detachable and adjustable. It makes for the safety of the tire, the tourist and the machine. Over 10,000 of them have been sold and they are in great demand wherever they have been introduced.

The company turns out also another useful specialty, the "Kant-Skid," as it is known, one of the most practical and reliable of all inexpensive devices designed for use on pneumatic and solid rubber tires to prevent skidding. "It is made of a succession of strips of chrome leather 1-4 inches wide, looped through iron rings with the end brought back evenly to the middle and secured together by strong steel rivets clinched through and studded with broad, heavy steel heads. A steel plate also attached with steel headed rivets, adjusts itself to the roads so that there is always a reliable grip, no matter what the conditions may be." It is exceedingly easy to fit and adjust, very durable and moderate priced.

These improvements are patented. They are the invention of Mr. C. B. Woodworth, manager and head and founder of the company, and are now selling, not only all over this country, but in Europe as well. Over 5000 "Kant Skids" have already been marketed, and the demand fairly outruns the company's facilities to turn them out.

Mr. Woodworth established this business in 1905 under the present style and at the present location. He is Canadian born, but has been a resident and business man of the Newtons for the past thirteen years. He was formerly of Woodworth Bros. auto and bicycle dealers of Newton Highlands, and for a number of years was with the Newton Rubber Works Co. in a responsible position. The Leather Tire Goods Company had its inception in his inventive genius and faculty. The Woodworth Tread and the "Kant Skid" were both perfected by him, and their popularity is due to his business energy, acumen and enterprise.

A branch office for the sale of these products is maintained in the automobile district of the Metropolis at 1662 Broadway, New York. It is under the management of Fred Blumenthal.

Newtonville however, where it originated over thirty years ago is its headquarters and seat. The mills and yards there cover something like two acres of ground. Scattered over this area is a group of one, two and three story buildings embracing the planing mill, power house, wood working shops, cabinet shop, lumber sheds, dry kilns, building materials department, stables, offices, etc., altogether comprising the most extensive plant of the kind in these parts.

The power house is of brick. It contains a steam plant of 120 horse power capacity. The place is provided throughout with electric lights, for night as well as day work, and is modern likewise in every particular of its equipment. The planers, band-saws, sanders, moulding machines and other wood working machinery and apparatus with which it is provided, are all of the very latest up-to-date type and pattern, reflecting, in that respect, the enterprise and progressiveness of the management.

The H. F. Ross Company is a manufacturer at Newtonville of builders' finish, fine interior and cabinet work, mantels, etc., and incidentally, a large dealer in building lumber, windows, doors, blinds, etc., both for its own use and for the trade. It has always on hand here a large stock of lumber and timber, rough and dressed, together with mouldings, laths, shingles, etc. It employs in its manufacturing departments steadily about 50 hands largely on special orders on short notice from architect's drawings, with high grade architects detail work a specialty, but chiefly on its own contracts for public buildings, apartment houses, schools and churches, business blocks and fine residences throughout New England, the class of building contracts it most affects. On these building contracts for construction work, it employs ordinarily 150 or more. Its staff all told will probably average 200 skilled men, and these are kept busily employed, practically the year round.

Examples of large contracts executed by this company might be instanced by the score. A few however, for our purpose will suffice. Among the fine and costly apartment houses and hotels of the Hub, the following were built by it: The "Windermere", "Haverland", "Renaissance", "Bretagne", the "New Reynolds" Hotel and many more. Many of the finest mansions of Newton and other residence suburbs of Boston, were also erected by it; also the following public or quasi public buildings, viz, Channing Church, Newton; The Newton Bank Building, one of the finest structures in town; the Taylor Buildings, Newton; the Associates Building, Newtonville, and so on. As builders in short, they rank among the foremost and first, and are practically unlimited as to cost and field; with their own mills, their long experience and their resources, a concern certainly or no ordinary order or kind.

This business was established as we have said, thirty years ago. Its founder was H. F. Ross. The principals in the company at present are H. F. Ross, president and treasurer, Louis S. Ross, vice president and secretary. They have headed the business since 1896. When the stock company was incorporated un-

Indeed, the motto of the store, is "Money Refunded if not satisfied."

The store now occupies 12,000 feet of floor space, on Moody street, directly opposite the Waltham Post office. With immense windows for display purposes and unrivalled illuminating facilities it is the best lighted store in Waltham either by day or night. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars worth of merchandise are here displayed with seventy-five courteous clerks in constant attendance at the sixteen different departments.

MOUNT IDA SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Jewett came to Newton and purchased the property at the corner of Bellevue Street and Summit Avenue, and established the Mount Ida School for Girls.

During the first year the school had only a few pupils, but Mr. Jewett used the year in equipping the school properly, and the following year there were enrolled in the school 17 pupils. The Mount Ida School has just closed its fifth year with an attendance of 75 students coming from some 25 different states.

The Mount Ida School sends students to Wellesley, Smith, Mount Holyoke, Vassar, College for Women, Baltimore, College for Women, Cleveland, Oberlin, University of Chicago, and many other institutions of higher education, on its certificates without any examination whatsoever. Besides preparing students for college, this school also offers general elective courses in which English and Literature are the only required subjects, and for these courses the school gives its diploma. The school also offers advanced elective courses in English, literature, history, of art, French, German, Italian, Spanish, piano, voice, violin, art, Latin, and other subjects, equivalent to at least two years in any of our American colleges for women.

Recently the school has been visited and addressed by Dr. Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Dr. Lyman Abbott, Dr. Henry vanDyke, Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Dr. William D. MacClintock, Dean Chicago University, and many others. Professor and Mrs. Jewett do much for the social life of the school.

Of the many attractive residential suburbs of Boston none can equal this beautiful city. Its people are cultivated and hospitable, noted alike for high moral qualities and for social graciousness. Mount Ida is in the very heart of the best residence section, and within easy reach of the many magnificent churches for which Newton is justly famous. From the windows of the Mount Ida School the dome of the Boston State House, the Memorial Hall of Harvard University, and the windings of the River Charles may be seen. The beauty of the scenery and the quiet of Newton make the situation most desirable for a girls' school.

The school occupies four large modern sunny buildings, heated by steam, and lighted by electricity, having an elevation of two hundred and ten feet above the sea level. There is no malaria. The buildings have been newly and attractively furnished throughout. The sanitary equipment is of the most modern description. The students' rooms are large, well furnished, and unusually attractive.

It is the purpose of the school to furnish the pupils with a home where, under natural and normal conditions, the harmonious development of mind and body may be secured. The pupils are surrounded by only such restraints as are deemed necessary for the best work and for the greatest good of the whole. We endeavor to develop self control and self reliance, rather than enforce obedience by a multitude of irritating rules of conduct.

The purpose of the school is to magnify quality, personality and culture, rather than quantity, apparatus, and curricula.

free transfers were given from one line to another in either the city or the suburbs. The number of surface lines from the congested area outward was increased practically to the point of saturation of the highways. Not only were more cars provided but larger cars, that each might accommodate more passengers, and faster cars that the carrying capacity on the different routes might be increased by shortening the time necessary to cover them. Where it could be done satisfactorily arrangements were made for bringing the cars of other companies well into the city on the Elevated's tracks in order to save rehandling passengers as much as possible.

This was only the beginning of the working development, however. This was laying the foundation without which the broader structure, that grows year by year and must keep on growing as long as Greater Boston does, could be raised. Street railway traffic increases at a most astounding rate. In 1900 the Elevated system carried something less than 700,000 revenue and free transfer passengers a day. Last year it carried approximately 1,130,000 passengers every 24 hours and 37 per cent of them rode on free transfers. This was an increase in six years of 35 per cent in fare-paying passengers and more than 300 per cent in free transfer riders.

If the increase in traffic were uniform all over the metropolitan district the transportation experts would have a comparatively simple proposition before them. It would then be a matter of providing proportionately larger facilities everywhere each year, which might not always be easy but still would involve no uncertainty. As a fact, though, there is no way of telling any length of time in advance how the increase in traffic will be distributed over the 400 or 500 miles of track in the system, and at this point the most scientific kind of judgment must be brought to bear on innumerable questions.

"Preparedness" is the watchword of the men who have in hand the upbuilding and extension of the Elevated Company's great system—preparedness not merely for the emergencies but for the permanencies, though these may be so far away as to appear to the layman not to be present influences. When a new rapid-transit line is opened there must be ready other new lines to meet the new conditions it will create. There must be already formulated the plans for still further development in the future. If things are to be done economically they must be done with reference to what is going on at the moment, and what may have to be undertaken later, in other parts of the transportation system. In these days of restricted capitalization and of demands calling for enormous expenditures every step must be taken with reference to every other, or what seems an immediate economy will turn out ultimately to be wanton wastefulness.

There could hardly be a stronger contrast between scientific and unscientific transportation methods than is afforded in Boston by the subways—the old subway that has been in use ten years and the new one that is to be opened within a few months. The former was built with reference to overcoming difficulties that had arisen when only surface cars were in use. But even for that purpose it was inefficient almost from the day it was opened. Its stations and platforms, for instance, while designed with some reference to future traffic, were not built of sufficient size. No proper allowance was made for the rapid annual increase in the number of passengers to be accommodated, nor of the larger, longer and heavier cars that were bound to come as street railroading progressed. This subway was planned and built by a public commission employing expert engineering advice; but the practical transportation man was practically left out of it.

The new Washington Street tunnel parallels the old Tremont Street Subway, but more nearly approaches the true centre of congestion and it is of larger capacity in every way. Its ultimate purpose—it is to be used exclusively by through elevated trains—was determined in advance, which was, of course, a distinct advantage. But without the guiding hand of the Elevated's experts, applied with considerable firmness at times, the new tunnel would probably have been an example of engineering and structural perfection with such serious practical defects as to greatly impair its value in the solution of the broad transit problems. The fixing of the route, the alignment and grades, the location of stations, the arrangement of tracks and platforms, the selection of each detail of equipment, all have been based on expert knowledge and study that reached out beyond the province of the engineer, beyond that of the economist, beyond that of the traffic manager's traditional functions. It is a concrete example of the scientific street railroading that has been so effective in giving Greater Boston, in the last decade, a local transportation system that is generally recognized, all over the world, as approaching the ideal as closely as a human undertaking can.

Ford Now Controls World's Runabout Trade

A tale of a promise and of its fulfillment

WHEN THE HISTORY OF THE MOTOR CAR, its inception and perfection, is written, it will be shown that the advent of the Ford four-cylinder runabout marked the beginning of an epoch in methods of manufacture as well as in the commercial development of the industry.

UNTIL HENRY FORD CONCEIVED HIS STUPENDOUS PLANS for the building of a serviceable, durable, motor car that should fill an urgent need for a business runabout as well as a two-passenger pleasure vehicle, the automobile business had the aspect of one grand hurrah of high prices—an hysteria of extravagance in first cost, cost of operation, maintenance and repairs.

UP TO THAT TIME VALUE HAD NO RELATION TO PRICE. The disparity between demand and supply created fictitious standards and the public was asked whatever price it was thought it would stand. Standards of value based upon actual cost of materials and work, such as obtained in other branches of the engineering art, were unknown.

PRIMITIVE AND WASTEFUL METHODS, lack of experience, of organization and of facilities to do things the modern way; wasteful shop systems—or rather lack of system; complicated "fussy" design; multiplicity of needless parts—these factors dictated the exorbitant maker's cost, and the customer was asked to pay a handsome profit on that.

OF COURSE THIS WAS ALL WRONG—there must come a time of sobering up; the motor car industry must eventually resolve itself into a practical, rational business. Values must inevitably adjust themselves and there would be a day of reckoning for all. Thinking, reasoning men in and out of the industry saw that time approaching—but thought it still a year or two off.

FORD SAW AN OPPORTUNITY; he reasoned that there was a chance for the man with the necessary ability, foresight and daring to capture the trade of the world in what he considered the most important branch of the industry—the utility runabout. The conquest must be so complete, so decisive, no rival could later wrest the control from him. The campaign must be on a sound basis of quality, value, and prices dictated, not by present unstable conditions, but by an accurate forecast of the future, if it was to succeed and endure.

MECHANICALLY—well, there were runabouts in plenty, but they were of the obsolete "one lung" type that had run its course—would no longer be tolerated at home or abroad. The time was ripe for a four cylinder runabout that should fulfil the needs and the promises for which the others had proven so inadequate.

THE PRICE WAS A VITAL PART OF THE FORD PLAN. Price, within the reach of thousands instead of hundreds, created the necessary market: this in turn warranted production on a magnificent scale; and quantity production made the price possible—profitable in the aggregate. And yet the Ford motive in setting so low a figure on so excellent a product is still incomprehensible to many.

AFTER MANY MONTHS OF CAREFUL THOUGHT—of designing, perfecting, testing—the Ford plan was announced to the World. The rest is history, and it constitutes the most spectacular chapter in the chronicle of the industry.

FORD CONTROLS THE WORLD'S RUNABOUT BUSINESS TO-DAY—his right there is none to dispute. Already there are over 7,000 of these cars on the road (to be exact, there were up to July 1, 7419). Ford runabouts lead all others in sales in every State, as shown by the monthly registrations, and there are more Ford Cars in Germany, in France, in Belgium, in Italy, to-day than of any other American made motor car. The "Yankee Peril" so much discussed by European motor trade journals means the "Ford Peril"—this car being, admittedly, the only one now capable of competing with the foreign product on its own ground. The same qualities, the same features that have conquered all opposition at home and which command the admiration and respect of American buyers constitute its strongest claims to eminence abroad.

FOUR CYLINDER MOTOR; shaft drive; long wheel base; magnificently built, and made throughout from the highest quality of metals known to the art—Vanadium Chrome Steel—forged—pressed—stamped and scientifically heat treated—place it on a par with the best in the world, regardless of price. Not a cast malleable working part in the entire car.

BUILT FOR HARD SERVICE on American roads, we do not confine our demonstrations to "Brussels carpet tests," but invite the most rigid scrutiny on every part. We challenge the world to show better material, more accurate workmanship, more careful assembling, more thorough testing of a motor car. There is not a weak link in the chain of its excellence—we make no excuse or apology for any detail of its design or construction.

SEVERAL HUNDRED POUNDS LIGHTER than any other car of similar power, that lightness is the customer's guarantee of quality—for lightness combined with strength, flexibility and hardness such as this car has proven to possess can only be obtained by the use of the best materials known to the art. Reserve power sufficient for all possible conditions or emergencies. Tire cost reduced to one-tenth what it is on the other cars. In short the Ford runabout stands to-day the most adequate representative of the perfect motor car—the type of many years to come.

7,000 ENTHUSIASTIC OWNERS INDORSE every adjective, multiply every superlative, we use to advertise it.

OVER 600 OWNERS IN BOSTON will testify to the wonderful performances and enduring qualities of this Ford car. And, more important than all else, these 600 owners will testify to the uniform courtesy and liberality of the Ford Motor Company in its treatment of customers. The regulation National Association of Automobile Manufacturers' guarantee goes with every Ford runabout—fix that in your mind; but we do not stop there; there are a hundred and one ways in which we serve customers—cheerfully—promptly—gratis. Thanks to quality-material, replacement of defective parts in Ford runabouts is less than in any other model we ever made. We can afford to be liberal, therefore, and when occasion does arise we gain the customer's everlasting friendship by the way we do it. "Ford quality" plus "Ford courtesy" constitute the greatest value to be had in a motor car to-day.

Mr. Day Appointed

Governor Guild has honored the city again in the appointment of one of our highly respected citizens to an extremely important commission to determine the scope of proposed improvements in the metropolitan district. Mr. Henry B. Day, of West Newton, will represent the department of finance in the commission of five just named by the Governor and Mayor Fitzgerald jointly. The other members are Hon. Benjamin N. Johnson, lawyer of Lynn, Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, civil engineer of Brookline, appointees with Mr. Day of the Governor, and Mr. Robert S. Peabody, architect and Hon. Thomas J. The commission is appointed under Chap. 108 of the resolves of 1907 and is instructed to investigate and report as to the advisability of any public works in the metropolitan district which will tend to the convenience of the people, the development of local business, the beautifying of the district or the improvement of the same as a place of residence. It shall consider the establishment of a systematic method of internal communication by highways, the control or direction of traffic and transportation and the location of such docks and terminals as the interest of the district may demand. It shall recommend the method of executing and paying for such improvements as it may suggest, and shall make such maps, plans and estimates of cost as may be needed for its investigations, or for the proper presentation of its conclusions, and may employ such assistants therefor as it deems necessary. $25,000 to be assessed upon the metropolitan district is appropriated for expenses, the commissioners serving without compensation themselves, and they are to report before December 1, 1908.

Norwich and Herring Pys.

For many centuries the city of Norwich, in respect of the manner of Carleton, was liable to provide annually twenty-four herring pies for the royal kitchen. Flomoffold in his "History of Norfolk," referring to this quaint service, prints a letter from the household officers of Charles I., making "divers just exceptions" to the quality of the pies which had been forwarded by the city sheriffs.

The main exceptions read as follows: "First, you do not send them according to your tenure of the first new herring that are taken."

"Secondly, you do not cause them to be well baked in good and strong paste, as they ought to be, that they may endure the carriage the better."

"Thirdly, whereas you should by your tenure bake in these pasties six-score herrings at the least, being the great hundredth, which doth require five to be put into every pie at the least, we find but fewer herrings to be in divers of them."

"Fourthly, the number of pies which you sent at this time we find to be fewer than have been sent heretofore, and divers of them much broken."

"And, lastly, we understand the bringer of them was constrained to make three several journeys to you before he could have them, whereas it seemeth he is bound to come but once."—Chambers' Journal.

The Gospel of Good Cheer.

People loved Robert Louis Stevenson not because he was an admirable writer, but because he was a cheerful consumptive. He was a sufferer who for many years increased the gaiety of life. Genius alone can do this on a large scale, but everybody can do it on a little one. Our safest guide is the realization of a hard truth—that we are not privileged to share our troubles with other people. If we could make up our minds to spare our friends all details of ill health, of money losses, of domestic annoyances, of altercations, of committee work, of grievances, provocations and anxieties, we should sin less against the world's good humor. It may not be given us to add to the treasury of mirth, but there is considerable merit in not robbing it.—Agnes Repplier in Harper's Magazine.

How It Sounded.

"Mother," said the college student who had brought his chum home for the holidays, "permit me to present my friend, Mr. Specknoodle."

His mother, who was a little hard of hearing, placed her hand to her ear.

"I'm sorry, George, but I didn't quite catch your friend's name. You'll have to speak a little louder I'm afraid."

"I say, mother," shouted George, "I want to present my friend, Mr. Specknoodle!"

"I'm sorry, George, but Mr. — What was the name again?"

"Mr. Specknoodle!" George fairly yelled.

The old lady shook her head sadly.

"I'm sorry, George, but I'm afraid it's no use. It sounds just like Specknoodle to me."—Detroit News.

Brought a Blush to Her Cheek.

There was a story told of one of the world's great vocalists singing as a young girl at a private house. She was overwhelmed with praise. By and by, says the London News, she came and sat by an elderly lady, who congratulated her on the way she had sang, but ventured to offer one or two suggestions. The young singer treated the hints with scorn and afterward asked the hostess who "the old lady" was who had dared to give her suggestions. "Oh, that was Mme. Goldschmidt," replied the lady. "And who is Mme. Goldschmidt?" was the next impatient query. "Well, she's better known as Jenny Lind," said the hostess. And then the singer blushed for shame at her disdainful reception of hints from the "Swedish Nightingale."

His Preference.

"Our new chef," said the manager of the restaurant, stopping to chat with the patron who had deep lines between his eyebrows, "is a wonder. I really believe the man could take an old rubber shoe and make an appetizing dish of it." "That so?" asked the patron, tapping meditatively with his fork upon the steak that had been served him. "Suppose you tell the waiter to take this steak back and ask the chef to fix up a rubber shoe for me."—Modern Society.

The Farmer in the Lighthouse.

A farmer had secured an appointment as light keeper in a Maine coast lighthouse. The first night he went on duty he lighted up promptly at dusk and at 11 o'clock carefully extinguished the lamp. The next day of course there was trouble, and when he was taken to task he replied that he supposed 10 o'clock was late enough to keep the light going, as he thought that all honest men should be in bed at that hour.—Boston Herald.

His Memory.

First Boy—Did you really win three prizes at school?

Second Ditto—Yes, and one was for my excellence of memory.

"How did you win the others?"

"The others? I forget what they were for."—Translated For Transatlantic Tales From Blanco y Negro.

The Lucky Ones.

"Old Rounder is engaged."

"Gee! Who's the lucky woman?"

"There are millions of her."

"Why, he isn't engaged to more than one?"

"Nope; that's what I mean—all the others are the lucky ones."—Houston Post.

When Theft Ceased to be a Capital Crime in England

A generation ago a pastor in the Middle West was told by an estimable parishioner of things he had known in London, still a generation earlier; and now that pastor, in old age retirement, wonders if the rising generation may not find some of the good old Londoner's reminiscences both interesting and informing on the passing of "Hanging for theft." He will try to give some specimens of them, as nearly as possible in the narrator's own words.

A poor but pretty girl went into a small shop to look at its little stock of ribbons. Seeing some she longed to adorn herself with and was unable to buy, she slipped a roll into her pocket, unobserved as she supposed; and, soon bidding the shopkeeper, an acquaintance "Good day" she started homeward. To her surprise he walked out and accompanied her, chatting pleasantly till they were at a somewhat retired spot. Changing tone and manner he sharply said "Give me that roll of ribbon in your pocket." She did so bursting into tears, and begged him not to inform on her. "I'll have your life!" he sternly said. He had her arrested at once, swore to his sight of her theft, and, to the amazed horror of her neighbors, had her hanged in a few hours! It was kindling for a flame of righteous wrath.

But the torch to fire the kindling soon came.

A poor young wife with a little babe suddenly had her husband taken by the "press gang" for the army. He was her sole support, and she soon found herself starving. She could bravely bear her own pinching hunger, but the hunger cry of her baby when her milk for it failed so distracted her that she snatched a baker's loaf and ravenously devoured it. But by the time she could again nurse her babe, she was sentenced by the judge to be hanged at once. At the gallows a poor neighbor woman held her babe, which the condemned woman begged a few minutes to nurse once more, and obtained that last favor. Handing back her babe, she said to the hangman and his assistant, "Do, good, kind gentlemen, for decency's sake, hang me low!" She then quietly climbed the ladder, gave her neck to the fatal noose, and was swung into eternity. The news of it swept England like wildfire. It was the beginning of the end of Hanging for Theft.

Henry H. Read has leased the Townsend house, corner of Langley road and Knowles street, Newton Centre to Mr. J. B. Nero who moves from Rhode Island.

It is not to be wondered at that Burdett College of Business and Shorthand, 18 Boylston Street, Boston, has such a marked degree of success, for it leaves no effort unmade to merit the confidence which the public has in it. To secure the greatest accuracy on the typewriter, each student works blindfolded a part of every day. The enrollment for the Fall Term, which will begin on Tuesday, September 3, is greater than any so far in the history of the school.

Horse and Carriage Stolen

While John Butler was in his home at 23B Pearl street for a few minutes Sunday morning someone stole his new horse and carriage which he had left standing near the sidewalk. Mr. Butler had bought the animal but a few days previously and was about to drive it to Brockton. The hitching weight had been thrown over the fence, indicating that the outfit had been driven away in a hurry. The horse and carriage were later recovered at Potter's stable, Watertown, and police of this and surrounding places started a search for the thief.

Used False Measures

On a charge of knowingly using false measures Dominic Russo, a clerk employed in the store of Joseph Salemme, Lexington and River streets, West Newton, was arraigned in the police court Tuesday morning upon complaint of Joshua A. Harding, scaler of weights and measures.

Mr. Harding testified that Friday he found three measures in the store which he had condemned last year. When he attempted to take them away, after telling Russo who he was, he said, Russo got possession of the measures and would not give them up. Judge Kennedy imposed a fine of $15.

Places of Interest in Newton

For the benefit of visitors during Boston Old Home Week, the following leaflet has been prepared by Mrs. Anna L. Bailey, chairman of the Pilgrimage Committee for Newton.

Site of old Nanantun House, once a favorite summer resort of Bostonians—once home of Gen. Hull, Newton's most celebrated citizen—once a boarding school for girls—last kept as tavern by members of Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., and National Lancers—lost its prestige after Civil War and later became incorporated in the present building.

Site of Indian Burying Ground, near Charles River, where Waban and his tribe had a settlement.

Site of Old Mill built in 1631—transformed into a brewery in 1746—one of millstones used as doorstep, and now, with this inscription on it, "N. T.—1747" part of wall of the old brook.

Old Fuller House, just below square, an underground station for slaves, who were passed on from here to Concord—hidden room still there.

Harrington House, adjoining, from which Gen. Hull went out to be court-martialed.

Old Jackson House, Washington street (few minutes walk from Square), site occupied continuously by Edward Jackson, one of the pioneers of Newton, and his descendants, after 1670—Present house built in 1809 by Timothy Jackson.

Edward Jackson was the brother of John Jackson, the first permanent settler of Newton in 1639, on Hunnewell Hill.

Near by—Rebecca Pomroy Home for Orphan Girls—between five and eleven—kept till able to support themselves.

Corner Waban Park and Jewett street—home of Clara Louise Burnham, novelist, and daughter of George F. Root the eminent musical composer, who lived in Newton many years—Waban Park was the first place in town where land was sold by the foot.

Farlow Park—the gift of a generous citizen—five beautiful churches near it.

Corner Centre and Cotton streets, old cemetery, where the venerable founders of the city sleep.

First meeting-house was built here in the cemetery in 1660, both being the gifts of John Jackson—John Eliot, Jr., son of apostle to the Indians, was first pastor—His monument is near the middle of the cemetery.

The tomb of Gen. Hull, and the grave of his negro, Tillow, the last slave owned in Newton, are here.

On Nonantum Hill, near Monument St., is the old Kenrick House, built in 1732, with its heavy wooden cornices, and wainscots, and massive uncovered beams.

On Monument street is the Eliot Memorial, the site of the first Protestant Mission station in the world, where Eliot preached to the Indians—President Eliot, of Harvard, is one of the later descendants of this noble missionary family.

In a humble cottage in this vicinity, on Waverley avenue, Roger Sherman, one of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, was born, in 1721.

Next south-corner Ward st., is the Harbach House—built in 1760—with high wainscots, and uncovered beams in the living rooms, and other delightful evidences of antiquity—One of the most interesting features of the Cochituate Aqueduct is the great tunnel on the Harbach estate, cut through 2410 feet of hard porphyritic rock.

Back of the Harbach place lived the father of James Freeman Clarke. Dr. Samuel Clarke was the first man who preached Unitarianism under that name in America—was at King's Chapel 40 years—James Freeman Clarke spent the early part of his life in Newton.

In the middle of the last century, Newton was notable among Massachusetts towns for the number of distinguished people living there—among them Emerson and Hawthorne—Lydia Maria Child—Louise Imogene Guiney—Celia Thaxter—James Jeffrey Roche—James Freeman Clarke—Clara Louise Burnham, etc.

On Walnut street, Newtonville, is the handsome Newton Club House, and the new, finely equipped High School Building—and next beyond the fine estate of the late ex-Governor Claflin, where many notables have been welcome guests.

This property is to be purchased by the city for educational and recreation purposes.

The old Hull House was once located here, and was afterwards moved nearer the station, where it was occupied by the Newton Club, prior to the erection of the new building.

Further out is the beautiful Gothic gateway of the Newton Cemetery.

West Newton is its early days was one of the chief centres for the mail stages—and on Washington street, near Elm, stands the ancient building which in the year 1760 was the chief tavern on the Natick Road—Here the American, British and German officers slaked their thirst, and Lafayette stopped for a brief rest. Near it is a gigantic elm which was ten or fifteen years old when the captive redcoats passed by.

It was through Newton street that the prisoners of Burgoyne's army were taken to Cambridge.

In West Newton was the first permanent normal school for girls in the world—and after the school was removed to Framingham the building was used for over fifty years as the Allen Classical School, where pupils came from all parts of the country—Hawthorne spent a winter here before going to live at Wayside, and wrote the Blithedale Romance here.

It was the home of Horace Mann, the founder of the educational system of Massachusetts, and also of Lydia Maria Child.

It was also the home of Isaac Williams, who at one time owned most of this section—His grandson, William, was a Signer of the Declaration of Independence, and another grandson founded Williams College.

Auburndale was the home of Dr. Eben Tourjee, and Miss Imogene Guiney. Here also are Lasell Seminary, Woodland Park Hotel, the chief public house of Newton, and the Newton Hospital. The old Whittemore Tavern built in 1724 was near the bridge over the Charles into Weston, and was a very busy place on the day of the Concord fight—and this was one of the most important highways of the country.

First Post Office in Newton was in Newton Lower Falls, as this was expected to be a great manufacturing place—mills here 1790—Alexander Hamilton Rice, Governor of Massachusetts, 1876-7-8, was its most noted citizen.

Echo Bridge is the crowning attraction of Newton Upper Falls a marvelous stone aqueduct on which the water of Sudbury River is carried across the Charles River on its way to the thirsty throats of Boston—It has one of the highest arches in the world, and the echo can be heard twenty-five times—Near by is the beautiful Hemlock Gorge, Darius and Cyrus Cobb, the artists, lived here.

One of the oldest hereditary places in America, built in 1681, and still standing is the Woodward House in Newton Highlands—Emerson lived near here in 1833.

Newton Centre was the home of Rev. Samuel F. Smith, author of our National hymn "America," written in 1832—He was the poet laureate of Newton, as well as of the U. S.

Here too, is the Newton Theological Institute—the first school-house was built here in 1699—here lives Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward.

Newton's record in the Revolutionary War is a proud one—also in the war of 1812—and during the Civil War the patriotism of her citizens was as prompt and intense as during the war for Independence—So far as is known, Newton was the first town in Massachusetts to erect a soldier's monument.

Not one of its villages that have not made its influence felt far beyond its river boundaries—several that have helped to shape the destinies of the State and Nation.

Through Susanna Rawson, Newton claims the first seminary for the higher education of girls—through Elizabeth P. Peabody, the introduction of the kindergarten into the U. S.—through Horace Mann, the Normal School System, and the organization of the whole public school system of Massachusetts—Barnes Sears, of Newton Centre, was largely responsible for the creation of public schools throughout the southern states—F. G. Campbell, of Newtonville, himself wholly blind, was the organizer and director of the Royal College for the Blind and Academy of Music in London—Charles Barnard, in founding the first evening school in Boston, near present Barnard Memorial, pointed a way to the solution of one of America's greatest economic problems—Eben Tourjee, of Auburndale lifted the N. E. Conservatory of Music to an institution of National importance—the songs of George F. Root spoke to the hearts of America's people during the stress of Civil War—and in Rev. S. F. Smith, Newton claims the author of a song limited to no era, and National in its theme and its appeal.

Electric cars from Subway, via Cottage Farm to Newton, run every few minutes—time one hour to Nonantum Square.

Old residents and others interested, who wish to be shown about the city, will meet at the Station in Nonantum Square about 10 A. M., on Friday, August 2d, and guides will be there to meet them.

—Crosby's Restaurant, 19 School street, Boston, is a good place to dine. tf

YOU DON'T HAVE TO

Sometimes when sickness is in the family and a physician has been called in and a prescription written, you have noticed the name of some particular drug printed on the paper on which the doctor writes the prescription.

This does not mean that you are compelled to take your prescription to the druggist whose name appears on the paper.

It is recognized the world over that a patient has the privilege of taking the prescription to any drug store that he prefers.

The prescription department in our store is always watched over by a registered pharmacist, a doctor's prescriptions are always filled exactly according to the way he intended they should be filled.

The appointment of ex alderman
Henry B. Day of this city to the important commission to investigate and report upon proposed improvements in the metropolitan district is extremely gratifying to those who view the present metropolitan situation with grave concern.

Mr. Day's well known conservatism can be depended upon to present in the most forceful manner the fact that the district has already assumed a tremendous debt and needs considerable breathing space before it plunges into unknown and apparently unlimited expenditures.

The recent discovery in the office of the state treasurer of errors in the metropolitan accounts, whereby the district is to pay about $125,000 to the Commonwealth, and of which Newton's share is about $12,000 shows the careless manner in which the state expends other people's or district's money. The fact that the appropriations for the Charles River Dam now amount to $2,400,000 without any provision being made to apportion this enormous sum upon the municipalities of the district, means that in the future, when some one gets good and ready, Newton will be called upon to pay large sums as its share of this work.

It is very evident from these casual observations that future improvements should be carefully considered and when authorized should immediately be apportioned upon the district. The policy of allowing these sums to become so large that when assessed they become extremely burdensome, should be discontinued.

Representative Garcelon's scheme to add four members at large to the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee is the first definite movement to make the party organization of some value in political campaigns. Mr. Garcelon is careful to say that his proposition does not reflect upon the present committee, but it is an open secret that the entire committee needs radical reorganization. The fall campaign, unless we misinterpret the signs of the times will open the eyes of the Republican party to the need of a change. Whether the Garcelon plan is adopted or not, some method should be found of increasing the strength of the committee by the addition of members at large. Personally we favor one member from each congressional district, to be selected by the state convention each fall. Mr. Garcelon deserves due credit for giving the movement a start.

The Democrats who scoff at the personal appearance of the Newton candidate for gubernatorial nomination will find that the Bartlett bangs cover a fine quality of brains.

Boston's Old Home Week will surely bring many old residents back to the Garden City of Newton. Let's give them a warm welcome.

CITY, HALL NOTES

Alfred M. Russell, agent of the board of health, is taking a vacation in New York and New Jersey.

Mr. Hatch of the city auditor's office is passing part of each week at Pembro-ton.

Miss Gertrude Bourne of the city clerk's office left Saturday for a vacation of several weeks in Vermont.

The health board received word yesterday that a considerable quantity of fish have died in the last few days in Hammond's pond at Chestnut Hill. It is thought that some disease is killing the fish. The board will make an investigation in order to remedy the trouble if possible.

Mr. Davis Dead

As we go to press word is received of the death this morning of Mr. Charles S. Davis of Newton Centre. Mr. Davis had been in failing health for some time.
He was about 86 years of age and had resided in Newton Centre for about a half century. He was prominent in the First church of that place and interested in village affairs, as he was a large owner of real estate. He is survived by a widow and two children, Mrs. William Z. Ripley of Newton Centre and Dr.
Charles Davis of Washington, D. C.

BOYS MEET DEATH

One Shot and Other Drowned

Two Injured by Explosion of Dynamite Caps

One boy was killed by a shot from a revolver with which he was playing, another was drowned by wading beyond his depth while bathing and two others were considerably injured by the explosion of a dynamite cap in a series of accidents which occurred in this city Friday afternoon and night.

Clyde B. Aldrich, aged 16, son of Alfred H. Aldrich, a Boston business man living at 83 Richardson street, shot himself in the right temple while playing with a revolver in a room on the second floor of his home early in the afternoon.
He died less than a half hour later.

The Aldrich boy was prominent in athletics in the high school, where last month he completed his freshman year.
Besides being captain of the freshman hockey team he took a lively interest in numerous other high school sports and was a regular attendant at the Y. M. C.
A. gymnasium. Early in the afternoon
he was on his way home from a neighbor's house when he came to a fence.

Often he had tried to vault the fence without success. To take a short cut to his home he again tried it and surprised himself by clearing the top. Going into his house he told his mother of the feat and asked for a tape measure that he might find out how high he had vaulted.
His mother sent him into a front room on the second floor for the measure.

A few minutes later Mrs. Aldrich heard what she thought was a firecracker exploding. A thud, as though some heavy object had fallen, quickly followed. Becoming alarmed she ran upstairs and found her son lying on the floor with a bullet wound in his head.

The boy had found a revolver which had been left on a mantel by his father.
The weapon had been bought a short time ago when Mr. Aldrich had heard suspicious noises about the house several nights, at a time when several robberies had occurred in various parts of this city. It is believed that the boy had twisted the firearm about, unexpectedly exploding it. It was a 32 calibre weapon and the bullet had imbedded itself in the head of the lad.

A local doctor and Medical Examiner
West were quickly summoned. The boy died a short time after they arrived. The Aldrich boy formerly lived in Melrose,
but moved to this city about a year ago.
Last year he took part in the interscholastic golf tournament, surprising many of his fellow players by an exceptional score.

The funeral took place at 2:30 Sunday afternoon at the family home. The service was conducted by Rev. Newell
C. Maynard, assistant pastor of Eliot church. Several hymns, including "Lead

We reprint the following article from The Pomotrope of Azusa, Cal., by request.

The whole community was saddened
by the death of Henry Sparks Johnson, which occurred Sunday night, June 23,
about 8 o'clock.

Deceased was born in North Brookfield, Mass., Oct. 22, 1874. His parents moved to Boston when he was very young and he entered the Boston Latin school at the age of 12, graduating in 1892. He entered Harvard University the same year, where he graduated in 1896.

After leaving college he accepted a position in the National Bank of Redemption of Boston, which he resigned later to come to California.

While in the employ of the Farmers' & Merchants' National Bank of Los Angeles he was offered and accepted the position of assistant cashier of the Azusa Valley Bank of this city and in July of last year was elected cashier of the First National Bank, which position he filled most satisfactorily until a few months ago when failing health compelled him to relinquish his duties.

The physician pronounced his malady
Bright's disease and although he struggled manfully against the disease, the end came all too soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson went to Camp Rincon a few days ago, and it was at this place that the final summons came.

H. S. Johnson was a member of the First Presbyterian church of this city and frequently sang in the choir; he was also a member of Azusa Lodge No.
305, F. & A. M., and of the Fraternal Brotherhood; a member of the Tennis club; of the Board of Library Trustees; and had just been elected clerk of the City Grammar School Trustees.

"Harry," as he was known to all his friends, was universally esteemed as an exemplary Christian man and his loss is keenly felt in business, social and religious circles.

His wife and widowed mother are the only near relatives left to mourn a good husband and a dutiful son.

The funeral services were held at the family residence on Dalton avenue at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and were attended by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. About 35 members of Blue Lodge of Masons were present, wearing the regalia of their order.

Kindly Light" were sung. There were floral offerings from his schoolmates in the high school, members of Eliot church Sunday school and former classmates in Melrose. The remains were taken to Mt. Auburn for cremation, where several hymns were also sung.

Wading beyond his depth while bathing with half a score of companions, Francis Driscoll, aged 14 years, son of Michael Driscoll of 412 Langley road, was drowned about 10 Friday night in Crystal Lake, Newton Centre.

The boys were fooling in the water at a point near the southeast side where the water was about up to their shoulders. The Driscoll boy waded out toward the deep water and had gone under twice before it was discovered that he was in danger. Several of his companions were able to swim and they tried to render assistance. By the time they reached the place where the Driscoll boy had gone under he was undoubtedly dead for they did not see him come to the surface again.

An alarm was quickly sent out. The police hurried to the lake with grappling irons and recovered the body in water from eight to ten feet deep. After being viewed by Medical Examiner West the body was taken to an undertaking establishment. Bathing in the lake was for-bidden last year. This season many of the lads of the vicinity early began bathing there, particularly evenings. The Driscoll boy, it is stated, went bathing in the forbidden waters without the consent of his parents. This was the second drowning accident of the kind in this city in two days, a Pole living in Newton Upper Falls having lost his life in a similar way in the Charles river near the city pumping station the night before.

William Whalen, 12-year old son of Andrew Whalen of 169 Adams street, and Willie Murphy, 10-year old son of Mrs. Hannah Murphy of 194 Adams street, were both seriously injured Friday afternoon while playing with dynamite caps in the Whalen barn. The lads placed one of the caps on a piece of iron inside the barn and attempted to explode it by striking the cap with a piece of metal.

The explosion which followed was more than the boys expected. Pieces of wood and iron were thrown about the structure, both lads being struck and wounded. The Whalen boy had his legs arms and forehead badly cut and bruised, while the Murphy boy escaped with fewer injuries, his legs being cut and bruised.
Both boys were taken to their homes,
where they were attended by doctors.

Rev. C. F. Richardson spoke a few sympathizing words from the text found in II. Samuel, 12:13: "He shall not return to me, but I shall go to him."
A choir composed of Mrs. H. F. Parkinson, Miss Canovan, Geo. Fuhr, W.
A. Sheldon, Ralph Burt, sang appropriate selections, with Miss Helen Jeffrey as accompanist.

The pall-bearers were Dana King, R.
W. Hamlin, Mr. Tandy, Mr. Trowbridge, Cornelius Smith, Dr. E. V. Rice.
There were many beautiful floral remembrances, bearing testimony to the loving esteem in which the departed was held.

At the conclusion of the services at the house the funeral party took the evening train for Pasadena, where the remains were interred in Mountain View cemetery, with the impressive Masonic ritual.

A special car was provided by the Santa Fe and a special electric funeral car was in waiting at Pasadena to convey the party to the cemetery.

Think Story a Hoax

What appeared to be a serious case of attempted robbery and an assault with a knife upon Theron Gleason, aged about 35, a carpenter living in Auburndale, was Saturday found to be a hoax, according to the police.

Gleason was under treatment in the Newton hospital with a gash in his right wrist. The flesh was cut through to the bone and an artery severed. Laying on his cot in the hospital Gleason admitted to Chief of Police Mitchell that he probably inflicted the wound himself while under the influence of liquor in the woods at Auburndale.

Gleason told the police the night previously that he had received a letter from a young woman, and not liking the contents took a walk in the woods off Islington road to think it over. He said he concluded to go see the young woman, and returned to his home at 85 Kaposia street, to have.

"Someone had been to the house and stolen my razor and also that of the man with whom I board," Gleason said.
"I then wrote a reply to the letter and started on a short cut through the woods to mail it," he continued.

"Suddenly a man jumped upon me and said he wanted all I had. I struck him and he cut my wrist with a knife. Then

I kicked him down and he lay senseless on the ground while I ran away," declared Gleason.

Gleason said the man who cut him on the wrist was the same man who stole the razors. Next morning the police said they believed this was a true statement, for they accused Gleason of taking the razors himself.

The police searched the woods off Islington road, but couldn't find the man
Gleason said he had knocked senseless.
Saturday morning they made another search of the vicinity, finding an empty bottle and a razor. Returning to the hospital Chief of Police Mitchell found the other missing razor in Gleason's pocket.

was due to gangrene. Mr. Rogers had and was well known among residents of Weymouth, and the remains were Sunday taken to the cemetery at this place for burial.

ducted by the Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton
a former pastor of the Eliot church,

Jesus as Thou wilt" and "It is well with my soul," a favorite of the deceased.

Two Bitten by Dogs

Two persons were bitten by dogs in this city Friday afternoon. It is believed that the animals had become affected by the hot weather. Neither of the victims were seriously injured. While Miss Mary Kybert, daughter of Mrs. Mary Kybert at the house of Miles Hopkins, 24 Beech street, Nonantum, her own dog turned upon her. The young woman was bitten in two places. The dog was shot by the police. Edward O.
E. Boyd was bitten by a dog said to have been owned by James I. Wingate of 11 Oak Ridge road, but the wound was not considered severe. The police ordered the dog restrained.

Big Smoke on Boulevard

A peculiar fire which caused considerable anxiety among many residents occurred shortly after 10 Friday forenoon, when a wagon used for spreading tar on a section of the Commonwealth avenue boulevard which is being reconstructed caught fire. The blaze caused a dense

A Tribute

In loving memory of Mary Suesser-ott who entered into Life Eternal July 10, 1907.

Rich in deeds, she left us at an age when many are just entering life's work having crowded into a few brief years a lifetime of loving service. Joyfully she performed the many kindnesses and helpful acts for those about her, with a rare insight perceiving opportunities often unseen by others.

She knew the heart of a child and the children responded to her charm and bestowed their love upon her. With her whole thought centered upon others, she proved her unselfish devotion again and again.

Her triumphant faith was manifested in her daily life. In their loneliness, the memory of this noble life comforts the hearts of those who loved her:

"Passing out of the shadow

Into a purer light;

Stepping behind the curtain,

Getting a clearer sight.

Passing out of the shadow

Into eternal day;

Why do we call it dying,

This sweet going away?"

Rescued from River

Harry Robinson, a young man of Weston, came near losing his life in the Charles river at Auburndale Tuesday afternoon, the prompt work of Officer O'Connor of the Metropolitan Park Police being responsible for saving him.

The young man was seized with cramps soon after entering the water.

Robinson went to the swimming spot as has been his custom, and had been in the water only a few minutes when he was seen to throw up his hands and cry for help.

O'Connor was on the station float at the time and he launched one of the boats and rowed to the spot where Robinson went down. He arrived just as the boy rose to the surface, and grasping the youth pulled him into the boat.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Newton Boys Capture Prizes at Camp Becket—Fishing Trip

About 35 members of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, Malden, Melrose and Somerville left this morning for a deep sea fishing trip. After spending part of the day at Swampscott the party went seaward about six miles in a chartered schooner, the members trying their skill at fishing. The trip was arranged by William Day of the Somerville association.

The senior Y. M. C. A. baseball team will play the strong Garden City team on the Cabot park diamond tomorrow and a close game is expected. The Y. M. C. A. team has been strengthened by the addition of "Tom" Sullivan, formerly left fielder of the Newton Independents. The battery for the Y. M. C. A. team will be Howard and Bartley.

Twenty-four Y. M. C. A. boys are in camp in the Berkshire hills at camp Becket. Word received yesterday states that the Newton boys captured the all-around trophy in athletic work. A field of about 100 boys, in charge of State Sec. Gibson, entered the competition. Walter Barrows of this city won the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes and Theodore Morton, also of this city, took first place in the broad jump. Barrows and Morton were tied for the high jump. The baseball throw was won by Percy Butters of Newton.

PRaises Assistant Chief

Mayor Warren's Appreciation of Act of George S. Holmes

Mayor Warren yesterday made public a statement warmly praising the devotion to duty of the late Norman P. Snell, driver of chemical A, and the work of Assistant Chief Holmes in gaining control of the horses after driver Snell had dropped dead on the way to a fire June 27.

Snell was driving chemical A, stationed at West Newton, in response to an alarm from box 242, when without warning he fell from his seat and was picked up dead. It was at great risk that Asst. Chief Holmes climbed onto the chemical and secured the reins.

Mayor Warren sent the statement to Chief Walter B. Randlett of the fire department upon official receipt of notification of driver Snell's death. The statement in part is as follows:

"George S. Holmes, assistant chief, witnessing the fall of driver Snell, directed his own driver to speed his horse ahead of the chemical and slow up for an opportune moment when the chemical should come alongside. Springing over his seat and leaving his carriage by the rear he grasped a ladder of the chemical, swinging himself to a position from which he seized the reins and drove to the fire.

"Such action in its quick perception of the remedy and its application, regardless of personal consequences, however grave the danger, is a fine illustration of the ability of this officer in time of emergency and of his devotion to duty. Please convey to him my personal and official expression of high appreciation of his conduct.

"I am also informed that driver Snell, though aware of some physical weakness, loyally continued in the discharge of his duty even unto death.

"The department long since won the public confidence, due in a large degree to the character and spirit of its personnel."

Mayor Warren closed the statement with the belief that under the charge of Chief Randlett such confidence will continue unabated.

Spraying and When it Should be Done

Mr. Editor:

Sir: This last week it was noticed that quite a number of people were having their trees sprayed for the Gipsy caterpillar. It is very desirable that they should take interest in killing the caterpillar, but it would seem that they are throwing money away spraying at such a late date. It will also have a tendency to discourage spraying, because those same people are apt to say next year that they sprayed their trees last year, and found no better results from doing so.

Then what is the use of spraying? Spraying is one of the best, if not the best methods of fighting the caterpillars if it is done at the proper time.

Trees ought to be sprayed when the leaves are about three quarters developed, which means the last week in May or the first week in June, that is the time the Gipsy starts to get in its work. When the caterpillar is in the small state it is easier poisoned.

Those who have seen to their trees and pulled them through safe need not fear now, for the larvae is now seeking out safe retreats in which to become pupae.

The destroying of the nests this fall will have to be done with renewed energy for they have increased 100 per cent this summer. Burying the trees in spring is another great trap when one can make it a system of going round every morning and killing those which have crawled under it for shade.

JUMPED INTO RIVER

Canoeist Disrobed but Became Rescued and not Rescuer

Four young men fell into the Charles river Sunday as a result of recklessness while canoeing.

Two who had never been canoeing before overturned their craft near the bend in the river at Auburndale, after being warned not to move about in the canoe. Throwing off his coat and shoes another canoeist jumped into the deep water to assist them. Becoming frightened he grabbed a canoe containing four persons, and had not a park policeman come quickly to the rescue this craft would have doubtless also been overturned. Park policeman Chaisson took the three young men out of the water. After drying out in the station they were none the worse for the experience.

The other tipover occurred early in the evening near the Weston bridge, but was not serious. The fine weather attracted several thousand canoeists to the river, and there were also many row boats on the stream.

An Ancient Superstition.

It is a historical fact that a cock was publicly burned at Basel in August, 1474, for the diabolical crime of laying an egg, the egg being also burned lest it should produce a cockatrice or fiery flying serpent. "On the Thursday before St. Lawrence's day," writes Gross in his "Kurtze Basler Chronik," "they burned a cock on the Kolenberg, together with an egg which he had laid, for they feared that a dragon might be hatched therefrom. The executioner cut open the cock and found three more eggs in him, for, as Vincent saith in the sixth book of his 'Speculum Naturale,' it bath always been held that a cock in his old age may lay an egg, whence ariseth a basilisk if it be hatched out on a dung heap by the serpent called coluber. Wherefore the basilisk is half cock and half serpent. He saith also that certain persons declare they have seen basilisks hatched from such eggs."—Cornhill Magazine.

Against the Middle.

When Bill, the ranchman, came to New York to play the races he put up at one of the most expensive hotels in the city and took one of the most expensive rooms. Then he went broke. The proprietor of the hotel and the clerk held a private consultation.

"We will let him stay here," they decided, "but from now on we will feed him liver and bacon until he pays his bill. Nothing does he get in this house from now on but liver and bacon."

They fed Bill liver and bacon for breakfast, dinner and supper for about three weeks. Then his luck turned. He forthwith walked out to a strange cafe to get something to eat. He looked over the bill of fare.

"What's this in the middle?" he asked. "Liver and bacon?"

"Yes, sir," the waiter answered. "Give me everything on the bill of fare both ways from liver and bacon," ordered Bill.—New York Press.

Plaster of Paris.

For experimental purposes and where but a few castings of medium and light weight are required plaster of paris has many good advantages as a material for pattern making. It is light, it can be given a smooth surface, it is easily given any required shape and it can be added to indefinitely. While it is brittle, this is more than offset by the saving in first cost and the quickness with which the pattern may be prepared. Plaster of paris sets in from three to six minutes, but if for any reason it is desired to keep the mass plastic for a longer period one drop of glue to a five gallon mixture will keep it soft for a couple of hours. Plaster of paris mixed with cold water has an expansion of about one-sixteenth of an inch to the foot when hardening. Should this be undesirable mix with warm or lime water, and there is no expansion.—Machinery.

Bamboo Sap in India.

In India the sap of the female bamboo is used for medicinal purposes. "Tabasheer," or "banasobhan," is sold in all Indian bazaars, as it has been known from the earliest times as a medicinal agent. It is also known in Borneo and was an article of commerce with early Arab traders of the east. Its properties are cooling to be strengthening, tonic and astringent. It has been analyzed and has been shown to consist almost entirely of silica, with traces of lime and potash. From its remarkable occurrence in the hollows of bamboo the eastern mind has long associated it with miraculous powers.

A Court Fool's Joke.

Scogan, the famous court jester of Edward IV., dearly loved a practical joke. Once he borrowed money of the king and when the day for payment came was unable to make good his word. He feared the king's anger and decided to appease him by a joke. Feigning death, he had his friends carry his body before Edward. The king fell a ready victim to the deception and in his lamentations over the supposed dead fool said he freely forgave the debt. Scogan immediately sprang to his feet, exclaiming, "The news is so revivifying that it has called me back to life."

Police Paragraphs

Dennis M. O'Leary, 30 years old, a plumber living at 16 Center place, was arrested last night on a charge of unlawfully using a horse and carriage.

It is alleged that O'Leary last Sunday morning drove off with a horse and buggy belonging to Angus Butler from in front of Butler's house, 23 Pearl street. Butler had left the outfit, which he had bought only a short time previously, standing in front of his house for a few minutes. He went into the dwelling to prepare to drive to Brockton and when he came out the outfit was gone. It was later recovered in a Watertown stable.

In court this morning O'Leary was fined $40.

THEATRES

Majestic Theatre—This is the last week of rehearsals of "The Green Bird" and next Monday night the new D. K. Stevens and John A. Bennett musical show will be given for the first time on any stage at the Majestic theatre. Although the piece was written by a Boston man and is backed by Boston capital it is a thoroughly New York production for all of the principals are Broadway favorites and the chorus is composed of Manhattan's very prettiest maids. Fred Lennox, George Schiller, Will H. Sloan and John P. Kennedy, who have the four leading comedy roles have all been featured in Broadway productions within the past year, and Miss Elsa Ryan needs no introduction. The scenery for "The Green Bird" is being painted by Artists Hammond and LaMoss who did "The Sultan of Sulu" and other beautiful productions and the costumes are being made by the same people who made the costumes for "Woodland" and a greater part of the New York Hippodrome productions.

"I suppose you have read in the papers—if you have time to think about anything except yourself—that the Westfield bank is wrecked. They have arrested Mr. Hartley and Mr. Mannings, but that does not help the rest of us. In a short time I presume I shall be on the county. If you had married Dan Martin, as I wanted you to do, I should not be facing this terrible situation, but you always were headstrong, and my whole life has been sacrificed to the effort to raise you as your dear dead mother would have had me. Even now Dan is willing to forgive your folly and marry you. He will have the house all done over, and his sister will go to John's to live, and there will be only Dan and you and me."

The letter covered five closely written pages, and Annabel read it through twice with fairly set lips and dry eyes. Then very deliberately she put on her coat, hat and gloves and went out for a long walk in the snowy park, where motor cars filled with fur clad figures flew past and laughing children pelted her with harmless balls of feathery whiteness. It was a glorious day, and when she came back to her dingy hall room she was smiling, and the hard lines had faded from her face. Then she wrote her answer:

My Dear Aunt Molly—I am so grieved to hear of the bank wreck. I had not read of it in the papers, because we have been enjoying the privilege of some special instruction under Professor — of New York, and I have been working at the academy night and day. Perhaps the bank receivers may save something, and in the meantime you must not worry, and I will have the store closed to you, and the rent will more than keep your house going, and each week I will send you some of my earnings. I am inclosing a money order for $25 that I happen to have in hand. Have Mr. Gregory arrange the transfer of the store property. As to Mr. Martin, please do not urge that upon me again. I still feel that I have some right to happiness, and I know it will never come to me through Dan Martin.

Not one word of reproach, no reminders of a dun colored childhood and a dreary girlhood, spent under nagging of the most trying sort; no reference to the fact that her own patrimony had gone under with her aunt's small fortune in the bank wreck; no intimation that she had sent almost her last dollar in the money order and must now drop her art studies and seek a position in the workaday world. She smiled grimly as she mailed the letter. Her aunt would accept the sacrifice and wait to Dan Martin over Annabel's lack of appreciation.

Dan Martin! How she hated every inch of his undersized person, his small beady eyes, his perpetual smile, his weak, receding chin! She mailed the letter with a strange feeling of independence achieved, for now she had paid to her own satisfaction the debt of gratitude imposed by her aunt, which had hung over her young life like a pall. She was free now to work out her own happiness.

But for the next week happiness seemed to move further and farther away. In later years she never thought of those days without shuddering.

The holidays were over. Nobody wanted to hire clerks or buy illuminated cards or telephone records or any of the pretty things she painted. The room rent was again due. She might sell her few casts and painting outfit. She set her lips firmly and climbed the stairs to a fashionable employment agency. The manager was sitting at the telephone when Annabel entered. She hung up the receiver with an impatient frown.

"What do you want—a position as governess or companion? Nothing like that in view; a hundred applicants for every position. Oh, wait a minute! You look bright. Can you do manicuring and dress hair a bit and mend faces? If you can do it even halfway, I wish you'd try this place. I've sent the customer a dozen girls, and they always part after a terrible scene. The woman's a crank, but you look as if you had tact."

The upshot was that Annabel, with 25 cents in her purse and a notice of rent due under the door of her hall room, went to see Mrs. Cartwright Brown, and that highly strung personage said with dissatisfaction and suspicion in her voice that she would give the girl a trial.

The Cartwright Browns were newly rich. The father had made an enormous fortune through his own efforts and was proud of it. The mother was so burdened by it that she was on the verge of nervous prostration. Annabel saw it was nervous and not temper and took heart. Later she learned that there were a son and a daughter away at college who were just a little ashamed of their new riches.

Nobody, Annabel least of all, knew how it happened, but she became the virtual head of the Cartwright Brown household. Mrs. Brown vowed that she could hire a visiting manicurist and hairdresser, but no one could stand between her and domestic and social worries as Annabel could.

It was Annabel who reorganized the staff of servants and installed a competent housekeeper. It was Annabel who had the conservatories brought up to date. Annabel who made out congenial dinner lists. Annabel who conferred with Mrs. Brown's modiste and Mr. Brown's tailor. Annabel who shipped smart, suitable clothing and room furnishings to two colleges.

Annabel's position in the household was peculiar. She was neither housekeeper nor private secretary—just "Miss Annabel." She did not receive with Mrs. Brown on Wednesday afternoons, but she did join the family occasionally at the theater or in viewing art exhibitions. And it was after one of these rare occasions that she realized the full extent of her happiness. She had been hunting congenial work, not an art career. She knew now that her small talent for drawing had offered her only an excuse for fleeing an unhappy home life, but that she never would have become a great artist, while she was a competent manager of the Cartwright Brown home. She sent her aunt's allowance regularly and gave no thought to the future—until the two young people came home from college. The daughter was a mere butterfly, who neither appreciated nor resented Annabel's position in the household. The son was a grave faced chap who seemed suddenly oppressed by the responsibility of his father's wealth. He had studied theoretical sociology in college and on practical lines among the gilded youth of his class.

By this time the Cartwright Browns were at their country place, and Annabel found that her early morning rides were subject to interruption, not unpleasant, but disturbing. Norman Brown insisted upon unloading upon her capable shoulders, as his mother and father had done before him, the burden of his personal problems. But they were no longer burdensome when he found that Annabel shared his ideals about the use of wealth, and he boldly carried his plans to his father.

"No more college? You're going into the works? Say, what will our rich friends think?"

"I am more interested in knowing what the men at our works will think. And Miss Annabel says—"

Cartwright Brown waved his hand as if to dismiss the entire subject.

"Oh, if Annabel says you are right neither heaven nor earth could move you. I declare that girl has this family hypnotized!"

"Nothing of the sort, and you know it," replied his son hotly. "She has simply taught us how to make the best of our money."

"And cured your mother of nervous prostration. Gracious, when I think of those old days! Oh, try it if you like."

Letter from Miss Molly Sewell to Annabel Maitland:

... We were immensely shocked. Of course I had watched for your name under some magazine illustrations or for some work you would send me, and when none came I sent Dan Martin to Denver to find out what you were doing. You, a Sewell and a Maitland, hiring out as a mere servant! You must come home at once. The Westfield bank will pay 50 cents on the dollar, and we can get along somehow, and if you show some signs of settling down I think Dan will marry you after all. He isn't like some men, holding a grudge.

Letter from Annabel to her Aunt Molly:

... The wedding took place yesterday afternoon. I wanted to have you come, but we were compelled to hasten matters. There is trouble at the Blackstone smelters, and Norman wants to be on the ground at once. He is a prince among men, dear aunt, and you will learn to love him when we come to see you, forgiving the fact that this prince found his Cinderella not behind the kitchen stove, but in his mother's boudoir. I am not ashamed of my work in the past year, for it brought me the greatest happiness that can come to a woman. We were married with the full consent of his parents, and I cannot write more. My cup of happiness brims over and boils out mere words.

MOLLY.

Moral Snobbery.

One of the commonest forms of snobishness is not social at all, but moral. Many people are moral snobs who have not a grain of social ambition. When Napoleon said, "I am above morality," he not only gave expression to what some great people have secretly thought about themselves, but to what thousands of their small admirers have openly said of them. They do not reject, perhaps, as they justify their heroes, that to declare any one in the world above morality is to say that morality has ceased to exist, has been found out and exploded, nothing remaining but some utilitarian rules suitable for the guidance of mediocre minds. The moral law must be supreme or nowhere. Yet this, as it seems to us, self evident proposition is by no means easy to apply. Most of us feel that for any one to lay too much stress upon the moral shortcomings of a great man is a sign of a small mind or at least of a defective education. We do not habitually speak of Nelson in respect of his marriage, of Bacon in the matter of his proved corruption, of Coleridge in connection with his opium habit or of Charles Lamb in his cups as we should speak of the circumstances. Must we, then, admit ourselves to be moral snobs? The prima facie evidence is very much against us.—London Spectator.

Why They Wanted to Win.

We know of only one case in which a man has tried to select a wife by a competitive examination. Fifteen ladies entered for the matrimonial prize and sat down to a paper of questions of which the following are samples:

Name seven kinds of pie and describe how each is prepared. Do you advocate the use of chewing rings for teething children? Give in 100 words your views on suitable dress when married.

The climax came when the man who set the paper proposed to the winner. She refused him point blank, and so did the other fourteen.—London Tit-Bits.

The Man With Forty Ghosts.

A popular novelist talked with regret about the old ghost habit of the past.

"Famous painters first and famous writers afterward alike had ghosts," he said. "These ghosts were pupils, disciples. They did the basic work of the master's picture or novel, and the master polished up, put on the finishing touches and signed his name to it. This practice, indeed, still obtains in architecture. It was a practice that allowed a popular artist a manifold increase of production and consequently of income. Dumas, the elder Dumas, had no less than forty ghosts—forty intelligent young men writing away for him about D'Artagnan, Portos, Aramis and the rest. But Dumas was reckless, and the existence of his forty ghosts became known; hence a good deal of scandal. At the height of this scandal Dumas said to a lady one night:

"Have you read my last book, madame?"

"The lady, with a mischievous smile, replied:

"No, M. Dumas. Have you?"

He felt complimented.

A man from Philadelphia, says a writer in the Ledger of that city, was visiting in a town of very few inhabitants. One day when he was about to make a purchase he discovered that he had exhausted his small change. The shopkeeper could not break the ten dollar bill offered him, and the man went out in the main street to see how he might solve the difficulty. He asked several persons, but no one had the requisite amount for the bill. At last an old white haired, seely negro came along. In sheer desperation the man said:

"Uncle, can you change a ten dollar bill for me?"

"Uncle" looked dazed for a moment, then his shuffling figure straightened. With a doffing of the hat and a bow worthy of Chesterfield he replied, with dignity:

"No, marse, I can't change no ten dollar bill, but I done 'precates the compliment jes' the same, sah."

Birds That Boat in Their Nests.

"The mother bird sat on her eggs at the water's edge, and when I approached she pushed off with her foot as though the nest had been a boat, and away she floated calmly down the stream."

"What you saw was a rare spectacle," said the nature student. "The bird was a grebe, the columbus minor. She always builds on the water's edge, and her nest is always woven of aquatic plants so closely and firmly that it will float herself and her eggs without jerking. On the approach of danger the bird pushes off. Nor is she at the current's mercy during her voyage. She uses her foot as a paddle, and I have seen her steer her boat-nest with some little dexterity round a bend, landing in a quiet cove as well, say, as the average young lady waterman."

Fresh Sheets at Premium.

The woman who had just returned from abroad, where she had visited some country towns, was telling of the comforts and discomforts of the European country hotel. "They have an aversion to putting fresh sheets on the beds for every new guest," she said, "and always pulled down the bedclothes the minute we were assigned our rooms to examine the sheets. Ten chances to one they were wrinkled and had that 'slept in' appearance, and we invariably insisted on fresh ones. Finally we struck a series of towns where the hotel proprietors got the best of us, for the sheeting they used was a sort of crepe stuff, something like seersucker, and for the life of you you couldn't tell whether they'd been slept on or not."—New York Press.

Hardened by Sulphuric Acid.

Hardening an ordinary drill in sulphuric acid, states the English Mechanic, makes an edge that will cut tempered steel or facilitate cutting hard rock. The acid should be poured into a flat bottomed vessel to a depth of about one-eighth of an inch. The point of the drill is heated to a dull cherry red and dipped in the acid to that depth. This makes the point extremely hard, while the remainder remains soft. If the point breaks, re-harden, but with a little less acid in the vessel.

A Dangerous Secret.

Upon asking an eminent scientist how he accounted for enjoying exceptional and unbroken good health a doctor was informed that the cause was habitual self denial. "In fact," admitted the professor, "I only partake of one meal each day." "Hush!" exclaimed the physician in alarm. "Pray keep this to yourself! If many people were to follow your example we medical men should be ruined."—Westminster Gazette.

His Little Scheme.

"You mortified me terribly," complained Mrs. Kitchley.

"How?" demanded her sick husband.

"Why did you tell the new doctor you were in the habit of eating corned beef and cabbage? We never have such common food as that."

"Well, I want him to fix his charges on a corned beef and cabbage basis."

The Usual Cause.

"Ma, Sis is just home from the hair-dresser's, and she's in a tearing rage. What's wrecked her temper?"

"I'm not sure, but I rather think it was a head-on collision caused by a misplaced switch."—Baltimore American.

Irish Church Bells.

It was about the time of St. Patrick, in the fifth century, that bells began to be adopted in the Christian church, though their use in other directions was long anterior to Christianity, as Mr. Lazard records having found some in the pulchre of Nimroud. The first Christian bells, like Patrick's, weighed only a few ounces and from that day gradually increased till the greatest weight was reached at Moscow with 118 tons of beautifully enriched work, a strange contrast to the humble "Clog-an-eadhachta Patraic," or "bell of Patrick's well," sometimes referred to as the bell of Armagh, with its diminutive dimensions of six inches high by five inches broad, four inches deep, made of thin sheets of hammered iron, bent into a four sided form, fastened with rivets and brazed or bronzed. This bell is at once the most authentic and the oldest Irish relic of Christian metal work that has descended to us, writes W. J. Fennell in the Belfast Gazette, and is mentioned in the "Annals" under the date of 552.

The Puffed Out Chest.

"The puffed out chest is a delusion which has succumbed to scientific knowledge of the human body," said a drill officer. "It came into existence purely for show reasons or from false analogy. It was seen that men deep in the chest were strong men, and the old drill sergeants probably imagined that by making men throw out their chests they would make them strong, as well as make them look strong, which is a complete mistake. Instead of strengthening a man, puffing his chest tends to weaken him, as it throws a strain upon the heart. We now tell men to be sure and not puff out their chests. If you puff out your chest and do dumbbell exercise you are to hold the breath. That strains the heart. Any exercise that prevents breathing freely is bad. Knotted muscles are also wrong. You see a man with immense chest muscles and perhaps you think he is really an ideally trained man, but such muscles simply bind the chest and tie the heart down."—Reader Magazine.

A Catch Question.

Of Bishop Short, who held the see of St. Asaph, many curious stories are told. Occasionally he put questions to candidates for ordination that apparently had no connection with the discharge of their parochial duties. They tested probably their wit or tact, two necessary qualifications to public men, but nothing more. One such question proposed by the bishop was the following: "Which has the greatest number of legs, a cat or no cat?"

As might be expected, this created a titter, but the bishop would not take a laugh as the answer, and consequently he repeated the question and desired some one to solve the problem. At last one of the candidates, smiling, said, "I should think, my lord, a cat."

"No," retorted the bishop; "there you are wrong, for a cat has four legs, and no cat has five."—London Telegraph.

A Thing of Many Names.

The Thames has been the cause of much controversy. Its name has been variously stated as Tameses, Tamese, Tamisae (at the junction of the Isis and Tame, near Rochester), Tamisa, Tamisa, Thamisla, Thamesis and finally Isis (where it flows between the Oxfordshire and the Buckinghamshire shores). Thus at Oxford it is still often called the Isis until it receives the shallow river Tame just below Rochester, from which point it is called Thames. Historians trace this error to an early attempted division of the Latin word Tamesis into two words, Tame csi or Tame Isis, suggested perhaps by the existence of the Tame in Buckinghamshire. The Saxons called it the Thames, ancient maps and documents designating it Thamesis Fluvius. —From "In Thamesland."

Harvard Then a College of Children.

In 1635, when elected president of Harvard, the Rev. Increase Sather refused to resign the pastorate of the North church in Boston for the sake of "forty or fifty children." Therefore he used to ride back and forth from Boston to Cambridge, charging to the college the cost of shoeing and baiting his horse and mending his saddle. Many of these students were but twelve or thirteen years old.—"Individual Training in Our Colleges," by Clarence F. Birdseye.

Naming the Baby.

They were choosing a name for the new baby.

"I think Esmeralda is too sweet," said one of the infant's aunts.

"Alfreda is better and more uncommon," said another.

"How would Alvina do?" asked a third.

"Hardly," said the fond father. "You seem to be getting away from the idea that this is a baby and not a new kind of cigar."—London Graphic.

The Epitaph of Mary Lyon.

In the grounds of Mount Holyoke seminary, overlooking the beautiful valley through which the Connecticut flows seaward, is a monument to Mary Lyon, the Massachusetts teacher who founded the college. On it is inscribed a sentence of her own. "There is nothing in the universe that I am afraid of but that I shall not know and do all my duty."

AN UP-TO-DATE TOWN

Hopedale Noted for its Magnificent Public Buildings and Public Parks

A Real Democracy where Employer and Employee Co-operate in Everything that's for the Public Good

Milford Journal Series

There are few towns in our Commonwealth whose people enjoy all the modern conveniences of city life. It can be said that Hopedale furnishes all the conveniences of an up to date city. Though a town of less than 3,000 inhabitants, Hopedale has all the modern public improvements. It has a complete sewer system which was built and is maintained by the Draper Company. It has one of the finest systems of park roads that can be found anywhere in the state; water works, electric lights, public baths, parks, play grounds and public buildings.

What the town is today, it was made by the Draper interests; both George Draper and his sons have shown great interest in its development. The late George Draper gave the Town Hall, a magnificent granite structure. His sons, Lieut.-Gov. Draper and George A. Draper, gave the beautiful memorial church. Gen. and Mrs. William F. Draper gave the beautiful marble fountain. The high school building was donated to the town by the companies. The Draper Company also gave land worth $5,000 and about $5,000 in money to the Union Church. J. B. Bancroft, vice-president of the Draper Company, gave the town its library. With an innate love for the town, all the members of the Draper family have maintained their homes in Hopedale. They were born and brought up there. They laid there a foundation for their success. They reside there most of the year beside their employees.

What might be termed the "Draper influence," which frequently is emphasized by substantial moves for social advancement, is reflected in every section of the town. The whole town is an example of prosperity in which honest plainness knows how to live. Here is a manufacturing town in which the head of the family bows to none of those humiliating necessities that in many places send so many wives and children out of their homes to aid a handicapped struggle for honor and independence. With his own hand he provides what the household needs, and exercises the free and untrammelled right of an American citizen. It is stating but the truth when we say that no town on either side of the Atlantic furnishes so many happy homes with all the comforts of life, as the busy little town of Hopedale, and this, too, at less cost to the large army of wage earners than can be found in any other manufacturing city or town in the United States. Labor is an important element in any progressive town. The question of wages is always important to the man who works. As a noteworthy factor in his earning capacity must be mentioned first of all the auspicious circumstances that he is as well paid as any man in the country doing the same kind of work and always is on good terms with his employer. Perhaps the most striking evidence of this is the freedom from industrial controversies. There have been no strikes at the Draper Company's works in the forty years of their operation. With such an ideal situation the employer and employee entertain the respect and good will of each other, all of which have a potent influence for the well being of the town.

The government of the town is in the hands of citizens who feel a personal responsibility for its well being. It matters not whether it is employer or employee, or whether it is the head of a department, or a mechanic or artisan. It is a real democracy and exemplifies an ideal condition through personal cooperation in everything for the public good. With such conditions, Hopedale presents a living example of what a real New England town government may accomplish where harmonious action is the predominant characteristic of citizenship.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—Special preparations have been made at Keith's to make Old Home Week a most memorable occasion. Realizing that Keith's Theatre, Boston, is looked upon as the representative vaudeville theatre of the country, a program has been arranged that will uphold this reputation. It is particularly fitting that the Falettes are to head the bill, for this, the best female orchestra ever organized, is distinctively a Boston institution. As usual during its summer engagement at Keith's there will be forty players under the baton of Caroline B. Nichols. The programs will be made of popular selections, as in former years. The best comedy sketch seen in vaudeville during the past year will be one of the features. Its title is "Peaches" and it is the work of George V. Hobart. William Courtleigh plays the role of "John Henry," a sporty young man who has reformed. There has never been a more attractive stage spectacle than Grigolati's Aerial Ballet, which will hold a place on the festival bill. The climax of this act is particularly beautiful. "A Night With the Poets," George Homans' artistic presentation, remains for a second week, but with a change of poems and pictures. The poets from whose works selections will be made are Longfellow, Whittier and Holmes. Clifford and Burke, the representative black face comedians and dancers; Work and Ower, who do a very novel acrobatic comedy turn; Leo Carrillo, mimic and monologist; The Gregsons, in a dainty singing and dancing sketch; James and Prior, travestists, and the Kinetograph, which will show some special views of Boston, will complete the gala program.

Grand Opera House—A. H. Woods' newest sensational melodrama by Owen Davis, entitled "Convict 999," will have its first presentation in Boston at the Grand Opera House Saturday evening, July 27, and continuing Old Home Week. There are four acts and fifteen scenes. "Convict 999" is said to tell a consistent plausible story and to possess a strikingly woven plot filled with stirring situations and replete with unexpected surprises and climaxes. There are several "big" scenes, among which is a bloody revolt of the convicts of Sing Sing Prison, and their escape, after a terrific battle with their keepers. In the latter scene is utilized Captain Kelley's Troupe of Dare-Devil Zouaves, who are especially carried to perform their marvelous feats of wallscaling and ladder climbing in the guise of escaping felons. Manager A. H. Woods promises one of the most perfectly balanced companies ever sent on tour. Matinees will be given as usual on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday and the hours for both matinees and evening performances have been arranged for the special convenience of suburban and out-of-town visitors. The Grand Opera House is very handy to reach being just above the Dover Street "L" Station.

An Enjoyable Sail

With so many excursion steamers leaving Boston daily, it is sometimes difficult to choose which trip to take. For a short sail, however, one will make no mistake, the trip to Nahant or Bass Point is chosen. The opening of the Bass Point and Nahant season has attracted thousands of people for the sail on the "General Lincoln" and the "Governor Andrew." Since the Bass Point line purchased these steamers from the Nantasket line, they have been altered and refitted and generally improved. With the improved boat service, the sail to Bass Point has become extremely popular. Bass Point itself has many attractions, not least among them the fish dinners that the hotels and restaurants are serving there. The new location of the Bass Point line in Boston is at Otis Wharf, 408 Atlantic avenue, a few doors from the Rowe's Wharf elevated station.

Gloucester Round-Trips Popular

There is no doubt of the popularity of the Gloucester daily and Sunday round trips by the staunch steel steamship Cape Ann, which leaves her berth at the foot of the State street elevated stairs promptly at 10:15 every Sunday, and at 10 sharp on weekdays. It is pretty safe to follow the crowd at that time of day, for the people are nearly all headed for the north side of Central wharf, there to take the steamer trip up along the celebrated "North Shore Route" to the quaintly picturesque city from which the largest fishing fleets hail.

NEWTON HAMMOND DEAD

Newtonville Resident Expired Suddenly Sunday Evening

The sudden death of Mr. Newton Hammond, aged nearly 61 years, at his home, 195 Lowell avenue, Newtonville, about 8 Sunday evening, came as a great surprise to his many friends in this and other cities. For many years he had been a well known caterer and enjoyed a wide acquaintance throughout eastern New England.

Returning to his home Sunday evening, apparently in good health, he went onto the piazza for a rest and less than half an hour later dropped dead. Death was due to heart failure, brought on by overwork.

Mr. Hammond was a native of West Woodstock, Conn. He had been engaged in the catering business practically all his business life. For 10 years he conducted a successful business of his own in Newport, R. I., and had afterward been employed in establishments in Boston, Fitchburg, Newtonville and Cambridge. Eight years ago he moved his family to Newtonville, where he gained a wide acquaintance and was well liked. He was active in the Newtonville Methodist church.

Mr. Hammond was a member of Charles Moore lodge, A. F. & A. M., of Fitchburg, Schwartz lodge, I. O. O. F., of Rhode Island, Order of the Eastern Star, Golden Cross and a number of other organizations. He is survived by a wife, one son and three daughters.

The funeral took place at 11 Wednesday morning at the family home on Lowell avenue. Rev. A. L. Squier, pastor of the Methodist church officiated, and the Eastern Star service was also conducted by members of that organization. Delegations were present from all the organizations in which he had been an active and respected member, and the floral offerings were many and beautiful. The remains were laid to rest in the Newton cemetery.

Died From Heat Prostration

Heat prostration caused the death of Miss Julia Sullivan, aged 33 years, at her home, 931 Walnut st., Newton Highlands, Saturday. While near her home Friday Miss Sullivan was overcome by the hot weather. Dr. George L. West, the medical examiner, was called in and it was found that she was in such serious condition that there was little chance of recovery. She sank slowly until the end came the following day. Miss Sullivan was a native of Kerry, Ire., being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan. Prayers were said over the remains at the family home Sunday afternoon by Rev. James F. Haney, assistant pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, after which burial took place in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Trees Destroyed and Fruit Stolen

During the last few nights a number of trees and numerous shrubs have been destroyed on the grounds surrounding the house of Mr. H. M. Crafts, California and Nevada streets, and a large quantity of fruit stolen. Police have made an investigation of the affair and it is believed that those responsible for the vandalism may be summoned into court. During the present week the police have been called upon to protect fruit trees in numerous parts of the city. In most of the cases trouble was due to mischievous boys.

Inquest on Boys' Death

In the police court Monday morning, with associate justice Copeland on the bench, an inquest was made in the case of Vincent Monahan, the young son of James Monahan of Pearl st., who was killed by an automobile on Washington street several weeks ago. At the conclusion of the inquest no announcement of a finding was made.

Mr. Herbert B. Stevens, a former resident of Church street, was the orator on July 4th at a flag raising at New Preston, Conn., and we are indebted to the Greenwich Graphic for the following account of his speech.

Mr. Stevens as the speaker for the occasion. Mr. Stevens said he would address himself more particularly to the children, assuming that the adults of the party might keep their ears closed, as they were duly apprised of the features surrounding our natal day. He spoke of America's discovery, the incidents that sent the early Pilgrims here, their landing, the troubles growing out of British domination, the tea episode in Boston harbor, the varied turmoil and sufferings and successes of the Revolutionary period, and the independence that it sought, accomplished and maintained, the vicissitudes and possibilities met and developed, the wonderful things done and made permanent, the men who have figured prominently from the beginning to the present, and whose names are respected and memory revered, and the great and wonderful country of which we so deservedly boast, and which is the marvel of the world. All which led to the pervasion emphasizing the symbolism of the flag as the emblem of the greatest of republics. That was what gave significance to the quiet and unannounced unfurling of the flag on this independence day by a gathering such as this, in keeping with our old New England ways, following the custom that has grown to be universal within our country's limits, since the first flag was raised by Washington at Cambridge in 1776, and in its present form as suggested to Congress by Reid and thus unfurled in 1818.

Mr. Stevens thoroughly interested and entertained his hearers, adults as well as the younger portion, and they made their appreciation pleasingly apparent.
